THE SITUATION AT PARIS

Communication Only by Permit from the German Authorities—Provisioning Under Their Supervision—Vexation of the German Soldiers at Their Exclusion from the Hard-Won Capital.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 30—A cordon has been drawn around Paris, and no person is allowed to enter or leave without a permit from the German authorities.

The revictualing of the city will proceed under German supervision. Confidence is expressed at the German head-quarters that peace has been secured. The German soldiers are chagrined at being prohibited from entering Paris.

The Forts Occupied by the Germans Without Resistance.

LONDON, Jan. 30—12½ P. M.—A dispatch from Versailles, just received and bearing date of today, says the occupation of the Paris forts by the German troops was unattended by any incident of general interest.

Moltke Dissatisfied with the Crown Prince's Conduct During the Battle—Fruits of the Armistice—The Regency in the Background.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 28.—A rumor is current that MOLTKE is greatly dissatisfied with the action of the Crown Prince's army on the occasion of the sortie of the 19th. He thinks that ground was lost unnecessarily, and expressed his opinion openly. There is a growing coldness in consequence between the Crown Prince and the Commander-in-Chief.

The great question now seems to be what practical result will follow the armistice. It is predicted, on what is considered good grounds, that the Regency is BISMARCK's thirteenth trick by which he expects to win the game. In FAVRE and the Republicans he sees nothing but the seeds of future trouble with France.

THE ARMISTICE

M. Favre's Telegrams to Bordeaux—The Elections and Convocation of the Assembly—The Constitution Imposed by the Treaty of Surrender.

BORDEAUX, Jan. 30.—A dispatch forwarded from Versailles on the 28th, by JULES FAVRE to the Government at Bordeaux, says the treaty was signed today. There is to be an armistice for twenty-one days. The National Assembly is to be convened at Bordeaux on the 15th of February. The elections take place on the 8th of February. A member of the Paris Government leaves at once for Bordeaux.

LONDON, Jan. 30—9 P. M.—The evening edition of the Times contains a dispatch from Versailles, which states that the contribution imposed upon Paris by the articles of capitulation is 53,000,000 francs.

Resign—Eugenie in a High Temper—Gambetta Signs the Armistice, But Won't—Gambetta Reported to Have Killed Himself.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—GAMBETTA ratifies the capitulation, and will not resign.

The Empress EUGENIE, after a stormy interview with the Duke DE PERSIGNY, ordered him to quit her presence, since he persisted in urging her to consent to the dismemberment of France.

LATER.—GAMBETTA is reported to have committed suicide.

THE NEGOTIATIONS.

Favre and Bismarck at Versailles—Full Particulars of the Interviews—Excitement at Versailles—When the Negotiations Are Over Bismarck Whistles a Significant Air.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 29, via LONDON, Jan. 30—Morning.—The negotiations between BISMARCK and FAVRE form one of the most interesting chapters in the history of this most memorable war. The arrival of FAVRE was known to none except those immediately concerned in conducting him through the lines. On his arrival at the house, accompanied by BISMARCK, in the Rue Provence, he was immediately admitted into the presence of the Chancellor. After a few preliminary remarks, BISMARCK said:

"Well, Monsieur FAVRE, what is the object of this visit?"

FAVRE, much affected, replied, "The object is to put a stop to the terrible sufferings of the country, for now that hope of relief from without seems to be lost, Paris must needs seek peace. All we ask is such consideration as a generous enemy might give, without the loss of advantage or honor."

BISMARCK expressed his desire to do all in his power to show his respect for the sufferings and gallantry of the French nation, consistent with the safety, honor and interest of United Germany. He said that this had been from the first to the last the object and desire of the Emperor and all his advisers, since the commencement of this unhappy war forced upon them.

FAVRE first demanded terms already reported. BISMARCK replied: "It is not in my province to refuse or to accept the terms, but I must say the present proposals are such that I cannot myself approve them, and I feel confident my august master will reject them. However, it is my duty to submit them to his consideration."

After this formal business BISMARCK assumed the familiar and sociable air for which he is famous, and invited FAVRE to partake of refreshment, adding playfully that from all reports, "you are not well supplied inside the city." FAVRE consented, and a good dinner was soon spread. After the entertainment FAVRE was politely but strictly placed under surveillance, and occupied an apartment over the Police Bureau.

As already known, the first overtures were promptly rejected. After FAVRE's return with the acceptance of the terms in substance demanded by the Emperor, great excitement prevailed in Versailles. The Mayor went twice to the Police Head-quarters to endeavor to obtain an interview, but received a peremptory order not to repeat the attempt, as such act would render him liable to imprisonment. All communication between FAVRE and outsiders was strictly prevented.

A subsequent interview took place between BISMARCK and FAVRE. The former afterward waited on the King and the Council, when FAVRE's acceptance on the part of the Provisional Government was submitted. After BISMARCK left the Emperor, he walked into the office of his chief aid, Gen. LEDMOUTZ, and began to whistle a Prussian air which the trumpeter sounds at boar-hunts when the beast is down and settled. After concluding, for a time he walked out again, never having spoken a single word to any one present.

Next morning, the 25th, the terms drawn up over night between BISMARCK and FAVRE in detail were handed to the Emperor, who opened the papers, read, frowned, and observed, in a disturbed tone: "Encore trop de Prussien." There is good reason to believe that the Emperor is badgered and bothered by the tricks of politicians, but he will be well pleased when all is over.

THE FRENCH ARMIES.

Chanzy's Army at Laval and Other Towns—Frisses to take the Field after the Armistice with 600,000 Men—Bourbaki's Army Dispersing.

BORDEAUX, Jan 30.—Gen. CHANZY's head-quarters are at Laval. The Fifteenth, Sixteen, Nineteenth and Twenty-fifth Corps are at Vierzon, Bourges and Nevers. Gen. BOURBAKI has the Eighteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-fourth Corps at Roulands and Poitarlier. GARIBALDI is at Dijon with 30,000 men. Gen. FAIDHERBE has the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Corps at Arras, Donai and Cambrai. LAVERE is in front of Havre with 30,000 men. The camps of instruction contain 250,000 men. The conscripts of 1871 number 300,000 men. At the end of the armistice France will resume the war with 900,000 men.

LONDON, Jan. 30—9½ P. M.—It is reported from Basle that members of Gen. BOURBAKI's army are crossing the frontier, armed, at Pruntrut, in Switzerland, and Neremburg, in Baden.

Bourbaki's Army in Switzerland—His Attempted Suicide.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—An official dispatch to the Baden Ministry states that the Army of Gen. BOURBAKI has entered Switzerland, crossing the border near Pruntrut.

The reported attempt of BOURBAKI to commit suicide is confirmed.

MISCELLANEOUS WAR NEWS.

Germans in the United States Rejoicing Over the Capitulation of Paris—Aid for the Suffering French People.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 30.—The Germans of this city celebrated the capitulation of Paris to-night by a torchlight procession, with bands of music, transparencies, &c. Several buildings on the route were decorated with German flags and devices, and illuminated. Notwithstanding the mud and snow there was a large turn-out. After the procession, speeches were made at Concordia Hall.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 30.—The Germans fired a salute of thirty-five guns today in honor of the victory of Germany.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—The news of the fall of Paris has caused very little excitement here. The Germans are preparing for a grand celebration to-morrow.

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—The ladies of Boston and vicinity will hold a preliminary meeting on Wednesday evening, to organize the efforts for sending relief to the sufferers in France.

Shipment of Arms and Munitions from the Watervliet Arsenal.

From the Troy Press, Jan. 30.

Many of our readers who have noticed the gun-carriages, limbers, and other warlike articles that have been passing through our streets for the past three months have no doubt speculated as to their destination, &c. As to their ultimate destination, we cannot give information, but we learn that they are forwarded to Col. CRAIGIN, United States Agent in New-York, who, probably, has disposed of them to some foreign belligerent Power. Something over $20,000,000 worth of property has been sent to New-York from the different arsenals in the country, and Watervliet Arsenal has contributed a large portion of it. The following is a correct list of the shipments made from West Troy during the past three months, as given by the Democrat:

100,000 rifle muskets and rifles	$1,600,000
20 batteries complete	246,000
11,000 revolvers and rifles	110,000
4,000,000 small-arm cartridges	60,000
15,000 rounds fixed ammunition	45,000
1,000,000 percussion caps	2,000
20,000 pounds of powder	1,000
10,000 saddle blankets	30,000
400 carry-combs	1,200
2,000 nose bags	4,500
5,000 waist belts and plates	1,750
6,000 pistol holsters	3,400
Miscellaneous stores valued at	10,000
Total	$1,518,850

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Turkey in the Conference—Control of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus—Prince Charles of Roumania—The German Council—Governor of the Philippines.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Constantinople to the London Times says the Porte insists that the London Conference shall restore to Turkey full control of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus, and refuses to consent to any new international stipulation limiting the navigation of those straits.

A letter from Prince CHARLES of Roumania is published, hinting at the approaching resignation on account of the too great liberty allowed the people by the Constitution.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—A decree has been issued which convokes the Federal Council of the Empire on the 15th of February. The German Parliament meets on the 9th of March.

MADRID, Jan. 30.—Gen. ZEQUIERDO has been appointed Governor of the Philippine Islands.

The Alabama Claims—Opposition from Victims of Other Robber Cruisers—Possible Basis on Which Great Britain Will Treat—The Committee on Foreign Relations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The dispatch sent you on Saturday on the subject of the Alabama claims is much discussed here today, both in diplomatic and political circles, and has had the effect to arouse those who hold claims for damages inflicted by vessels other than the Alabama into an active hostility to any treaty which does not provide for the settlement of all the claims. By some persons your correspondent's dispatch is regarded as affirming that the subject was brought before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations by the Administration in an official way, and then discussed in a formal and deliberative way. Such was not the meaning intended. The matter was brought before the Foreign Relations Committee in an informal way by a Senator at the instance of the Administration, and not in an official manner. The matter was discussed, but only in an informal manner in order to get the opinions of members of the committee. The basis upon which Great Britain is prepared to make the treaty, and which members of the Committee on Foreign Relations regard as concessions on the part of the United States, is as follows:

First—Great Britain to admit her liability in the Alabama claims, and to pay all damages done by her.

Second—To submit to arbitration the cases of the Shenandoah, Florida, Georgia and other vessels.

Third—To enter into a treaty binding the two countries hereafter to prevent the sailing of the vessels of war from their ports to be used against a friendly Power.

Fourth—To make and execute efficient municipal laws for this purpose.

These terms, it seems, are not satisfactory to some prominent members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations for several reasons, the principal one being that they provide only for the settlement of the Alabama claims proper, and that this would weaken very materially the other claims. One of the most prominent members of the Committee does not conceal his opposition to any settlement of this question until Great Britain stands ready to concede some of her Canadian territory in part payment for these claims. The prospect of concluding a treaty with Great Britain on the terms proposed are at best only fair, owing to the objections made by Eastern Senators and the uncertainty of its being ratified by the Senate.—Evening Post.

MEXICO.

The Political Campaign—The Tehuantepec Expedition—A Great General Opens a Drinking Saloon in the Capital—American Claims Paid.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 28, via HAVANA, Jan. 30.—LERDO DE TEJADA has resigned. It is believed that M. ROMERO will succeed him. MATIAS PAYNO will assume the Secretaryship of the Treasury. The prospects of the re-election of President JUAREZ are flattering. The war in Guerrero is unfavorable to the Government. The Americans throughout the country complain of the oppression of the local authorities. The Tehuantepec Expedition is progressing favorably. The engineers report a sufficient quantity of water on the summit of the route for canalizing purposes. The celebrated Gen. ANTELINO RIVERA has opened a drinking-saloon in the capital. A conduit of $2,000,000 leaves the capital on the 30th. The Government has paid Minister NELSON the full amount demanded by the United States Government for arms stolen from them and sold to the authorities of Matamoras.

LATER.

LERDO DE TEJADA, after resigning his position in the Ministry, has again assumed the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

CUBA.

A Suspicious Craft Off the Coast—No Spanish Men-of-War at Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—A suspicious two-masted steamer appeared off Trinidad on the morning of the 28th. There are no Spanish war vessels now in port, and consequently the matter cannot be investigated.

THE HOLDEN IMPEACHMENT.

Formal Opening of the Trial—Another Postponement.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 30.—The impeachment trial of Gov. HOLDEN was formally began today, Chief Justice PEARSON presiding. The counsel for both managers and the respondent were present. The managers requested that the eighth article of the impeachment be amended so as to substitute "of Neathery" for "of Barry." The defense objected, but the Chief Justice decided in favor of the managers, whereupon the defense asked until Thursday to amend their response in accordance with the change of the eighth article. Time was granted until Wednesday, and the Court adjourned until 11 M. on that day.

VAN ETEN'S PARTNER.

Arrest of Another of a Gang of Stupendous Swindlers—Sketch of Some of their Operations.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 30.—The notorious forger and bank swindler, known at different times and in different places by the names of Charles Venpool, Charles Brockaway, Charles Seymour, William C. Waterman, John Pike, &c., was arrested last week in this city by Chief of Police BENGEMAN and Detective BISHOP. This morning he started for New-York, in custody of Detectives TULLY and KELSO, of that City, where he is wanted to answer for the commission of some of his peculiar crimes. This man was the partner of LEWIS M. VAN ETEN, who was arrested in New-Orleans a short time ago, and arrived in New-York in charge of Detective SHARPE, who, according to report, had to exercise considerable strategy to evade the service of writs of habeas corpus while going north. This man and his associates have been engaged for several years in systematic swindling operations, and there are reasons to believe that they have defrauded more than fifty banks in different parts of the country out of sums ranging from $25,000 to $75,000. Their plan was to purchase United States certificates of deposit and bank checks, certified or not, then alter the numbers and amounts, and collect the money. The prisoner was known here as WM. C. WATERMAN, and was arrested for robbing the Bank of North America in New-York, of $50,000.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Report of the Judiciary Committee on the Claim of Victoria C. Woodhull et al.—No Chance for Them Under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments—The Law of the Matter—The States Have Jurisdiction and Congress Has Nothing to Do with the Case.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Mr. BINGHAM, from the Committee on the Judiciary, today made to the House the following report upon the memorial of VICTORIA C. WOODHULL, asking the enactment of a law declaring that women have a right to vote under the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment. It is regarded as disposing entirely of the constitutional questions which were likely raised by Miss WOODHULL and adopted by the other leaders in the woman suffrage movement. A minority report from the same Committee has been signed by Gen. BUTLER—who has accepted Mrs STANTON's invitation, and is going to say "cohabitation" for women—and Mr. LOUGHRIDGE.

The Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the memorial of VICTORIA C. WOODHULL, having considered the same, make the following report: The memorialist asks the enactment of a law by Congress which shall secure to citizens of the United States in the several States the right to vote without regard to sex. Since the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution, there is no longer any reason to doubt that all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside, for that is the express declaration of the amendment. The clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States," does not, in the opinion of the Committee, refer to privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States other than those privileges and immunities embraced in the original text of the Constitution, article 4, section 2. The Fourteenth Amendment, it is believed, did not add to the privileges or immunities before mentioned, but was deemed necessary for their enforcement, an express limitation upon the powers of the States. It had been judicially determined that the first eight articles of amendment of the Constitution were not limitations on the power of the States, and it was apprehended that the same might be held of the provision of the second section, fourth article. To remedy this defect of the Constitution, the express limitations upon the States contained in the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment, together with the grant of power in Congress to enforce them by legislation, were incorporated in the Constitution. The words "citizens of the United States," and "citizens of the States," as employed in the Fourteenth Amendment, did not change or modify the relations of citizens of the State and nation as they existed under the original Constitution. Attorney-General BATES gave his opinion that the Constitution uses the word "citizen" only to express the political quality of the individual in his relation to the nation, to declare that he is a member of the body politic, and bound to it by the reciprocal obligation of allegiance on the one side and protection on the other. The phrase, "citizen of the United States," without addition or qualification, means neither more nor less than a member of the nation. (Opinion of Attorney-General BATES on Citizenship.) The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that, according to its express words and clear meaning of the second section, fourth article of the Constitution, all privileges are secured by it except those which belong to citizenship. COBB ES et al. vs. ELLIOTT, et al., 18 Howard, 372. In CORFIELD vs. CORYELL, 4 Washington Circuit Court Reports, 380, the Court say: "The inquiry is, what are the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States. We feel no hesitation in confining these expressions to those privileges and immunities which are in their nature fundamental, which belong, of right, to the citizens of all free Governments, and which have at all times been enjoyed by the citizens of the several States which compose the Union, from the time of their becoming free, independent, and sovereign. What those fundamental principles are would perhaps be more tedious than difficult to enumerate. They may be all comprehended under the following general heads: Protection by the Government, the enjoyment of life and liberty, with the right to acquire and possess property of every kind, and to pursue and obtain happiness and safety, subject, nevertheless, to such restraints as the Government may justly prescribe for the general good of the whole. The right of a citizen of one State to pass through or to reside in any other State, for the purposes of trade, agriculture, professional pursuits or otherwise, to claim the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus, to institute and maintain actions of any kind in the Courts of the State, to take, hold and dispose of property, either real or personal, and an exemption from higher taxes or impositions than are paid by the other citizens of the State, may be mentioned as some of the particular privileges and immunities of citizens, which are fairly embraced by the general description of privileges deemed to be FUNDAMENTAL, to which may be added the elective franchise, as REGULATED AND ESTABLISHED by the laws or Constitution of the State in which it is to be exercised. But we cannot accede to the proposition which was insisted on by the counsel, that under this provision of the Constitution, section 2, article 4, the citizens of the several States are permitted to participate in all the rights which belong exclusively to the citizens of any other particular State. The learned Justice STORY declared that the intention of the clause is that the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States," was to confer on the citizens of each State a general citizenship, and communicated all the privileges and immunities which a citizen of the same State would be entitled to under the same circumstances. (Story on the Constitution, volume 2, page 605.) In the case of The Bank of the United States vs. Primrose, in the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. WEBSTER said, that this article in the Constitution—article 4, section 2—does not confer on the citizens of each State political rights in every other State, is admitted. A citizen of Pennsylvania cannot go into Virginia and vote at any election in that State, though when he has acquired a residence in Virginia, and is otherwise qualified as is required by the Constitution of Virginia, he becomes, without formal adoption as a citizen of Virginia, a citizen of that State politically. (Webster's Works, vol. 6, pages 1.12.) It must be obvious that Mr. WEBSTER was of opinion that the privileges and immunities of citizens guaranteed to them in the several States did not include the privilege of the elective franchise, otherwise that as cited by the State Constitution, for after making the statement above quoted, that a citizen of Pennsylvania cannot go into Virginia and vote, Mr. WEBSTER adds: "But for the purposes of trade, commerce, buying and selling, it is evidently not in the power of any State to impose any hindrance or embarrassment upon citizens of other States, who go into them, going there, upon a different footing from her own citizens." The proposition is clear that no citizen of the United States can rightfully vote in any State of this Union who has not the qualifications required by the Constitution of the State in which the right is claimed to be exercised, except as to such conditions in the Constitution of such States as deny the right to vote to citizens resident therein, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. The adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution imposing these three limitations upon the power of the several States, was, by necessary implication, a declaration that the States had the power to regulate by a uniform rule the conditions upon which the elective franchise should be exercised by citizens of the United States resident therein. The limitations specified in the Fifteenth Amendment exclude the conclusion that a State of this Union, having a Government republican in form, may not prescribe conditions upon which alone citizens may vote other than those prohibited. It can hardly be said that a State law which excludes from voting women citizens, minor citizens and non-resident citizens of the United States on account of sex, minority or domicile, is a denial of the right to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. It may be further added that the second section of the Fourteenth Amendment by the provision that "when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors of President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, or executive and Judicial officers of the State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State being twenty-one years of age, a citizen of the United States, or in any way abridged except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State;" implies that the several States may restrict the elective franchise as to other than male citizens. In disposing of this question, effect must be given, if possible, to every provision of the Constitution. Article 1, section 2 of the Constitution provides that the House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year, by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature." This provision has always been construed to vest in the several States the exclusive right to prescribe the qualifications of electors for the most numerous branch of the State Legislature, and therefore for members of Congress, and this interpretation is supported by section 4, article 1, of the Constitution, which provides that the time, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof, but the Congress may, at any time, by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the place of choosing Senators. Now it is submitted, if it had been intended that Congress should prescribe the qualification of electors, that the grant would have read, "the Congress may at any time, by law, make or alter such regulations, and also prescribe the qualification of electors," &c. The power, on the contrary, is limited exclusively to the time, place, and manner, and does not extend to the qualification of the electors. This power to prescribe the qualification of electors in the several States has always been exercised, and is today, by the several States of the Union, and we apprehend, until the Constitution shall be changed, will continue to be so exercised, subject only to the express limitations imposed by the Constitution upon the several States, before noticed. We are of opinion, therefore, that it is not competent for the Congress of the United States to establish by law the right to vote without regard to sex in the several States of this Union without the consent of the people of such States, as expressed in their Constitutions and laws, and that such legislation would be in our judgment, a violation of the Constitution of the United States and of the rights reserved to the States respectively by the Constitution. It is undoubtedly the right of the people of the several States so to reform their constitutions and laws as to accord to the equal exercise of the right of suffrage, at all elections, held therein, under the Constitution of the United States, to all citizens, without regard to sex, and as public opinion creates constitutions and governments in the several States, it is not to be doubted that whenever, in any State, the people are of opinion that such a reform is advisable, it will be made. If, however, as is claimed in the memorial referred to, the right to vote is vested by the Constitution in the citizens of the United States, without regard to sex, that right can be established in the Courts without further legislation. The resolution made that Congress, by a mere declaratory act, shall say that the construction claimed in the memorial is the true construction of the Constitution, or, in other words, that by the Constitution of the United States the right to vote is vested in citizens of the United States, "without regard to sex," and that "anything in the laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding. In the opinion of the Committee, such declaratory act is not authorized by the Constitution nor within the legislative power of Congress. We therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the memorial of petitioners be not granted, that the memorial be laid on the table, and that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

LOSS OF THE KENSINGTON.

Collision at Sea Between a Bark and a Steamer—The Steamer Sinks in Thirty Minutes—Miraculous Escape of the Passengers and Crew—Rescued After Fifteen Hours' Exposure in a Boat.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 30.—The steamship Kensington, Capt. S. H. MATHEWS, left Savannah, Jan. 26, for Boston, with a full cargo, consisting of cotton, rice, lumber and hides. On Friday evening, the 27th, at 7½ o'clock, when thirty miles north north-east from Cape Hatteras, the Kensington was run into by the bark Templar, from Baltimore, for Rio Janeiro, receiving the full force of the bark on the port side, just aft the midships. The steam-ship was cut down below the water-line, filled rapidly, and went down in about thirty minutes. The passengers and crew of the Kensington, and one seaman belonging to the bark, who jumped from the jibboom of the bark on board the steam-ship when the vessels came together, had barely time to get in the boats and clear the wreck, before the vessel went down. The boats were steered in the direction of the bark where lies seen, but nothing could be seen of it, and the supposition was that that vessel had gone down also. The boats were then headed west for the land, which was thought to be the North Carolina coast, distant about thirty miles. The wind at the time of starting was north, blowing a good breeze, and the sea not very rough. After being in the boats fifteen hours the steam-ship Georgia picked up the crew, all of whom were saved. After taking to the boats large quantities of spars, rigging, &c., were passed not belonging to the Kensington. The following is a list of the passengers and crew picked up by the Georgia:

Passengers—John Nolan, A. D. Robinson, J. B. Lewis, M. Bailey, Mrs. Bailey and child, Miss J. Stiles, W. Marshall, W. O'Brien, E. Winslow, A. L. Brown, W. H. Williams, J. C. Lane, Charles Gindhan, M. Myers, Mrs. A. L. Brown, Mrs. Winslow.

Crew—Capt. J. H. Mathews, 2d officer, Joseph Baker, 3d officer; A. S. Lewis, second officer; Thos. Kelly, Jas. Percoy, Joseph Percoy, Daniel Kenney, Peter Cavanagh, Edward Sullivan, Robert G. Dekam.

Steerage—Mark Thornton, engineer; Hugh McAfee, first assistant; H. C. Thornton, second assistant; Allen McKenzie, James Ryan, John Edwards, Henry Kelly, James Kane, James Dalton, John Johnson, Pat. Ryan, Owen Donohoe, Brenien; Denis Dohey, Charles Beers, Thomas Dohey, coal heavers; Wm. Gowan, second cook; Peter Singer, cook; Louis Declarat, second cook; John Hailey, messman; Kate Anderson, stewardess.

The Georgia cruised about in the vicinity for some time, hoping to pick up the crew of the bark, but nothing of them was seen.

Another Account—Safety of the Templar's Company—The Vessel Towed to Fortress Monroe.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 30.—The steamer Georgia at this port, from New-York, brings the crew and passengers of the steamer Kensington, from Savannah, Ga., for Boston. The Kensington came in collision with the bark Templar, from Baltimore, for Rio de Janeiro, sixty miles north north-east of Hatteras. The Kensington was sunk, and it was at first supposed that the bark went down. Only that night one of the crew were lost, but she been towed into Hampton Roads. All the passengers and crew of the Kensington were picked up off Body Island, which they reached in three boats, and have arrived safely in the steamer Georgia.

THE INDIANS.

Message from the President on the Effort to Form a Government in the Indian Territory—Encouragement Become manded on this First Sign of a Wish for Fixed Government.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The President sent to Congress today the following message:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith an official copy of the proceedings of the council of Indian tribes, held at Okmulgee in December last, which resulted in the adoption of a formal declaration of a constitution for their government, together with a copy of the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the views of the Secretary of the Interior thereon:

It would seem highly desirable that the civilized portions of the country should be encouraged in establishing for themselves a form of Territorial government compatible with the Constitution of the United States, and with the previous custom toward communities lying outside of the State limits. I concur in the views expressed by the Secretary of the Interior, that it would not be advisable to receive the new Territory with the Constitution as it is now framed. So long as a Territorial form of government is preserved, Congress should hold the power of approving or disapproving of all legislative action of the Territory, and the Executive should, with the advise and consent of the Senate, have the power to appoint the Governor and judicial officers, and possibly some others of the Territory.

This is the first indication of the Aborigines desiring to adopt our form of government, and it is highly desirable that they become self-sustaining, self-relying, Christianized and civilized. If successful in this their first attempt at Territorial government, we may hope for a gradual concentration of other Indians in the new Territory. I, therefore, recommend as close an adherence to their wishes as is consistent with safety. It might be well to limit the appointment of all Territorial officers appointed by the Executive to native citizens of the Territory. If any exception of more to white rule I would recommend that it should be limited to the Judiciary. It is confidently hoped that the policy now being pursued toward the Indians will at last for self-government, and make him desire to settle among people of his own race, where he can enjoy the full privilege of civil and enlightened government.

Depredations by the Apaches in Arizona—Settlers Murdered and Stock Run off.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—Advices from Tucson and Prescott, Arizona, represent that the Apaches in great numbers are committing depredations, murdering the white settlers, and running off their stock.

A BLOODY TRAGEDY.

Three Brothers Killed by a Farmer in Illinois—He Discovers that They Had Murdered His Wife and Daughter.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—The following are the particulars, as far as can be ascertained, of the terrible bloody tragedy perpetrated at Rock Grove, Winnebago County, Ill. A farmer (name not given) residing between Spring Grove and Rock Grove, recently sold his farm and received the money last Tuesday. On Wednesday night he left his home and went to Rock Run. Returning from there, and as he neared his home, he was confronted by a man who demanded his money. The farmer drew a revolver and shot the robber dead. Starting for his house, he encountered two other men, each of whom he dispatched with his revolver. On entering the house he found his wife and daughter weltering in their blood, the latter being dead and his wife badly wounded. When last heard from one of the dead men was recognized as the stranger who had recently attempted to murder the farmer's family. This story seems to be improbable, but the details come from several different sources, and are nearly identical.

JAMES HAGGERTY.

His Funeral in Philadelphia Sunday—A Large Assembly—Scenes and Incidents.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer, Jan. 30.

Perhaps no funeral ever attracted so large a crowd as the funeral of the notorious JAMES HAGGERTY, which took place yesterday afternoon, from the residence of the deceased's mother, corner of Twenty-third and Filbert streets. Long before the hour announced, the streets in the neighborhood were crowded, and it must be said that a larger number of burglars, thieves, gut-throats, gamblers, ruffians and blackleg were never before seen together at one time or place. The residence of HAGGERTY's mother is situated in a portion of the city that has borne a bad repute for years past, it being called the "Gut." This locality extends along the eastern bank of the Schuylkill from Locust to Race-street, and to Twenty-second-street. HAGGERTY's house is at the north-east corner of Twenty-third and Filbert streets, is about the centre of this locality, and either for the reason, or the fact that HAGGERTY was the boldest of the ruffians known as the "Schuylkill Rangers," his house was regarded as one of the headquarters of the criminals of this city. It is a two-story, dilapidated, dingy-looking brick building, many of the window panes are broken, and from outside appearances one would imagine it to be the seat of poverty. On the first door is a drinking-saloon, very dirty and ragged in appearance. Here, behind the bar-keeper, before entering life as a boxer, jumper, &c., a small kitchen and dining-room, and a very small room used as a parlor, constitute the other apartments of the floor. The second story contains the private rooms of the family, and it is alleged that the remainder of the story were used as the receptacle of stolen goods. HAGGERTY himself, however, never deposited his "earnings there," but left them with a brother-in-law, now serving a term in the Auburn Penitentiary. In the little garden above-mentioned, the remains of HAGGERTY were laid, not after having arrived from New-York, on Saturday evening. An elegant coffin had been provided, and the body was dressed in a handsome shroud and fully exposed to the view of all who could get in. The lid of the coffin bore an inscription as to the name and age of the deceased. Among the crowd which filled the sidewalks, groups of all ages, and lumber youths, were on the top of a huge pile of stones at the south-west corner, and women, some dressed in faded mourning goods, were anxious to obtain a view. The crowd increased rapidly, every blackleg seemed carrying a dozen as many of minister-looking individuals.

The entrance to the house was guarded from 1 to 2 o'clock by no policemen, and the endeavors of the masses to obtain admittance to the little parlor, to view the body, baffled description. The morning trains brought over crowd, and after half a dozen pickpockets and gamblers had imbibed sufficient of the ardent to excite them, they would, with murderous yells, attempt to break through the crowd and view one more their dead partner. This was not easy, however, and the result was that some pretty scuffles ensued, and some black eyes were the resulting in a few broken heads, but the appearance of a strong posse of Police at about 2 o'clock restored comparative quiet. The Police then guarded the door and admitted only a portion of the anxious crowd. The funeral procession was to move at 2 o'clock, but for the reason that undertaker was not ready at the hour, perhaps because some notables were expected.

Shortly after 2 o'clock a commotion was visible among the crowd on Filbert-street, and the unruly masses fell back, clearing a passage for "Squire" MULLIGAN, JOHN DOUGHERTY, and LARRY SMITH, who arrived, and without experiencing any difficulty whatever, passed in the house to take a parting look at JAMES HAGGERTY, well known to them. When these "gentlemen" entered, a general feeling of approbation seemed to pervade the assembly. The Police at once took their cue, and shaking the hands of many to their friends, and every now and then some one would remark, "Birds of a feather flock together, dead or alive," and "a fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind."

Opposite the house, on Filbert-street, is a very large vacant lot, on which for City Line Tracks are now crowing another station. The lot is deeply excavated and filled with snow. It being somewhat dangerous to approach the excavations, nobody but a couple of dozen of careless urchins—the rising Schuylkill Rangers, generations—dared to descend on the lot. When once down of course, they engaged in snowballing, and noticing the effects of one ball fired at the crowd above, a general attack was made. Balls flew thick and fast, and lumps of ice occasionally intermingled. The crowd on Twenty-third-street exited, and attempted to cross; the horses of the hacks became frightened, and had it not been for the presence of mind of a few detectives, an awful calamity would have occurred.

About ⅔ o'clock everything was ready for the funeral procession, and soon afterward the coffin was brought out of the house by six individuals, whose names we unfortunately could not obtain, but whose countenances indicated their relations to the deceased. The coffin was deposited in a very shabby hearse, and a few of the deceased next appeared. His mother is a very matronly-like and respectable old lady, against whom aught has never been said or imputed. She was dressed in deep mourning, and cried silently. Her daughter, A Mrs. TUMBLY, followed, and a host of other female relatives of the deceased.

The carriages then filled by with considerable difficulty, and were soon followed by a very motley crowd of men and women. Everything being ready the procession moved down Filbert-street to Twenty-second, thence to Market, and up Market over to West Philadelphia and Hestonville, thence to Cathedral Cemetery, where the remains were interred. As the cortège was passing Market-street, an immense crowd had assembled, and the curious made would be very singular if heard on any other occasion. The neighborhood was filled by people until dark, and the past deeds of HAGGERTY were the theme of conversation. Most of the rough present regretted his early death, pronounced on him eulogies in a language unintelligible to any one not intimate with "slang."

Among those that accompanied the remains to the cemetery were the New-Yorkers, and as they were a class that respectable people would wish to be saved from, a number of policemen and detectives also went along. Perhaps some went for other reasons than the one stated.

It is safe to assert that from twelve to three thousand persons witnessed the funeral, of which the larger half belonged to the class which conferred such notoriety on the deceased. The man is gone, and we forbear remarks as to his career or that of his family and friends, but a very respectable citizen who witnessed the funeral cortège, being curious to know the extent of the criminal fraternity, remarked that few respectable persons could expect such a large gathering at their funerals. This is a sad reflection.

DEATH BY SUFFOCATION.

Four Human Bodies Found Dead in Bed.

An Escape of Gas the Cause of the Calamity—Appearance of the Remains—An Aggravation of Gross Negligence.

One of the most singular and heart-rending of recent calamities in this City was brought to light last evening, in a second-story back room of the premises No. 1,257 Third-avenue, between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth streets, where four persons were found dead. The person first making the discovery was CHAS. MULLER, a baker, whose duty was on the first floor of the premises, and who, finding the family bed not been astir during the day, about 4 o'clock went to look for them, opened the door, found JOHN LOUGHLIN, aged twenty-seven, his wife ANNE, aged thirty, their son BERNARD, aged four, and a young woman named SUSAN SANDS, all lying upon a bed and already cold. Without waiting to probe the tragedy, he hurried to the Twenty-third Precinct Station-house, corner of Eighty-sixth-street and Fourth-avenue, to give notice of the discovery.

Capt. BYRNES immediately hastened to the scene, and upon entering the room, in which he instantly detected a strong odor of illuminating gas, he found the bodies upon the bed as the German had described, and all lying in natural positions, with an expression of repose upon the faces, as if they had qu

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Monday, Jan. 30.

MEMORIALS.

Memorials were presented by Messrs. FENTON of New-York, CONKLING of New-York, and SUMNER of Massachusetts, from the Kings County Homeopathic and other medical societies, in reference to the establishment of a homeopathic national university at Washington. Congress to make the establishment of one or more professorships or lectureships a prerequisite to a charter for the same, and by Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, from the Cincinnati Board of Aldermen, asking that the Cincinnati and Newport Railroad Company be required to raise their bridge over the Ohio.

BILLS REPORTED.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, from the Military Committee, reported favorably the House bill, extending the benefits of the Soldiers' National Asylums to the soldiers of 1812 and the Mexican wars. Also, adversely, the bill relative to the sale of the arsenal at Pittsburg. Upon Mr. WILSON's motion the latter bill was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. BUCKINGHAM, of Connecticut, from the Committee on Commerce, reported back the House bill to authorize the removal of the Custom-house from St. Marks to Cedar Keys, Fla. Passed.

Mr. NYE, of Nevada, from the Committee on Territories, reported back with amendments, the bill to provide State Governments in New-Mexico and in Colorado.

Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported, without amendment, the bill for the relief of purchasers of real estate at Harper's Ferry. Also, adversely to the House joint resolution in regard to charges of desertion in cases of soldiers honorably discharged.

NOMINATION OF JURORS.

On motion of Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, the Senate took up the bill to authorize the President to accept the resignation of any Judge of a Court of the United States, and upon the expiration of the morning hour the bill went over.

THE GEORGIA QUESTION.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, moved to take up the Georgia question, remarking that the questions involved were those of law and fact, and that if a general discussion on the reconstruction question was avoided, the subject could be disposed of this afternoon. Mr. TRUMBULL's motion prevailed.

The resolution of the majority of the Judiciary Committee declaring Mr. HILL entitled to a seat was then read, and Mr. TRUMBULL, in support of the validity of the election, proceeded to detail the circumstances under which it took place. The question, he said, was, as to the composition of the Legislature, arising from the expulsion, in 1868, of seven colored members; the substitution for them of the minority candidates; the ineligibility of others under the Fourteenth Amendment, and the subsequent attempt by a military board of enrolment members—three for disqualification and fourteen for refusing to appear for examination, making twenty-four in all. The presence of a constitutional quorum in each House, and their proper organization, established a prima facie case in favor of Mr. HILL's claim, the allegation of the ineligibility of fourteen members being immaterial to the result. Mr. MILLER had received sufficient votes to insure his election, even after throwing out all the members alleged to have been ineligible.

Mr. STEWART, of Nevada, in advocacy of the claims of Messrs. FARROW and HILL, and Mr. WHITELEY to have been elected Senators from this State, argued that by the failure of Georgia to comply with the Reconstruction acts, she was not entitled to representation at the time of the election of Messrs. HILL and MILLER. He held that the election was by a body having no legal existence, and was therefore void. The action of Congress of July, 1870, admitting the State to representation, related back to the Legislature of that year by which Messrs. FARROW and WHITELEY were elected.

Mr. STEWART then moved as a substitute for the majority resolution that of the minority of the Judiciary Committee, declaring Messrs. FARROW and RICHARD M. WHITELEY entitled to seats in the Senate.

Mr. STEWART's motion was rejected. Yeas 18, nays 36.

The vote in detail was as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Ames, Bayard, Brewster, Cragin, Dennis, Dorsey, Fenton, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Pomeroy, Pool, Pratt, Ramsey, Rice, Stevens, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Wilson—18.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Blair, Buckingham, Carpenter, Chandler, Conkling, Conover, Corbett, Cragin, Davis, Edmunds, Fenton, Hamlin, Fowler, Hamilton of Maryland, Hamlin, Harlan, Howard, Howe, Johnson, Kellogg, McCreery, Morrill of Vermont, Patterson, Ross, Schurz, Sherman, Spencer, Stockton, Tipton, Trumbull, Vickers, Warner, Willey, Williams—36.

The question recurring upon the resolution declaring Mr. HILL entitled to a seat, Mr. TRUMBULL, of Ohio, the Democratic member of the Judiciary Committee, moved an amendment adopting the report of the minority, as a Senator elect from Georgia. He his motion withdrew at the request of Mr. TRUMBULL to, permit a direct vote upon the resolution.

Mr. STEWART moved to substitute the name of HENRY P. FARROW for Mr. HILL's.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, argued that the Georgia State Government was provisional, subject to the authority of Congress, and that its validity was secured in its subsequent recognition by Congress. He held that the election of Mr. HILL, in 1868, was legal and proper.

Mr. HAMLIN, of Maine, of the minority of the Judiciary Committee, in a speech, advocated the claims of Mr. FARROW and Mr. WHITELEY.

Mr. STEWART reiterated his views at length upon the point that the Legislature of 1868 was incapable of electing Senators, because of a non-compliance with the requirements of the Fourteenth Amendment and the Reconstruction acts. He went on to maintain that in the opinion of Congress, as shown by subsequent legislation, that the Legislature had no legal organization and could not even elect a clerk.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, a member of the Judiciary Committee, replied at length to Mr. STEWART, and explained the reasons governing the action of the majority.

At 5 o'clock, without reaching a vote, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

PETITIONS.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, presented a petition of manufacturers and dealers in tobacco, snuff, &c., of New-York, against an additional tax on sales.

Mr. STEVENSON, of Ohio, presented a petition of 200 business men and firms of Cincinnati relative to the tobacco trade; also, a resolution of the Cincinnati Board of Aldermen protesting against the Newport bridge, and asking that it be so modified as to conform to the recommendations of the Government engineers.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. MORRILL, of Maine—Declaring that any wines to all and all other intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, shall be deemed guilty of a crime against the peace of society, and on conviction thereof be punished by fine and imprisonment, &c., providing that all employes or officers of the Government, who shall continue to use intoxicating liquors, or shall become at all intoxicated, shall be summarily dismissed from the Government service.

By Mr. FERRIS, of New-York—To extend the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims.

By Mr. SCOFIELD, of Pennsylvania—To extend to the military and naval service, the benefit of the act for furnishing artificial limbs to disabled soldiers.

By Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio—To provide a mode of paying pensions.

By Mr. MCCORMICK, of Ohio—Requesting information from the President as to the employment of military officers in civil duties at the White House.

By Mr. BECK, of Kentucky—Prohibiting and annulling all contracts made by any person or persons for services rendered in connection with any claim or demand against the Government, either while the person is in office or for five years thereafter.

By Mr. PRATT, of Tennessee—For the appointment of a river inspector for the Western rivers.

By Mr. SMITH, of Tennessee—To extend the time for the redemption of lands sold at Memphis, Tenn., at United States tax sales.

By Mr. BURCHARD, of Illinois—Authorizing banking associations whose circulation is limited under act of July 12, 1870, in States where all the additional circulation has not been taken to apply for and receive circulation in excess of the amount by that act.

By Mr. MCCRARY, of Iowa—To regulate commerce among the several States. This bill provides for a general law under which, upon certain terms and conditions, companies may be incorporated and authorized to build and operate railroads, wagon roads, highways, running through two or more States, or through the territory of the United States, or to establish and carry on the business of an express company or other common carrier between points in different States or Territories. The object being to multiply lines of communication from the West to the East, to break down the monopoly in the carrying trade, and to cheapen transportation by creating and protecting competing lines.

By Mr. BAWTER, of Wisconsin—Granting land for a railroad from Berlin, Wis., to Bardwell, Wis., with a branch.

BILLS PASSED.

Mr. BEAMAN, of Michigan, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back the Senate bill appropriating $100,000 for the prosecution of the work on the St. Mary's Falls Canal and St. Mary's River, Michigan. Passed.

Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill to amend the act of July 28, 1866, making a grant of lands to Minnesota to aid in the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River. Agreed to.

Mr. LOGAN, of Illinois, moved to suspend the rules and pass the Senate joint resolution for the adjustment of the claims of persons against the Government, in connection with the building of vessels of war, to be referred to the Court of Claims. Agreed to by 121 yeas to 62 nays.

Mr. LANSING, of New-York, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill providing that assistant messengers who did the same work for the ninth session, and whose pay did not amount to $4 a day, get their pay increased to that amount. Agreed to.

WAITING THE MORNING HOUR.

Most of the morning hour was consumed in the reading of bills introduced, the opponents of the Air-Line Railroad bill having availed themselves of their right to demand a reading of the entire bill in order to prevent action on that bill at the morning hour. As soon as the call of States was concluded, dilatory motions to adjourn were made and the yeas and nays ordered upon them. In this way the whole of the morning hour was consumed.

CLAIM OF A MAIL CONTRACTOR.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a joint resolution repealing the joint resolution of July 15, 1870, authorizing the Postmaster-General to adjust the accounts of GEORGE CHORPENNING. He proceeded to give a history of the transaction. The resolution proposed to be repealed had been introduced in the House on the last day of last session, and had been passed under a suspension of the rules, without any statement of the facts, and had been sent to the Senate and there passed the same day, with an amendment in which the House concurred. The claim was based upon a joint resolution passed in 1857, authorizing the Postmaster-General to contract for carrying the mail. There had been allowances under the joint resolution of 1857, the sum of $398,317 extra allowances over his contract price of $707,202, and under the joint resolution of July 15, 1870, there had been allowed him $297,017 more, making an extra allowance on his contract of $676,334. The services for which this extra allowance had been made had all been provided for in the contract itself. Mr. CHORPENNING had taken his contract to carry the mail from Salt Lake City to Secession, to bring a news of the line from Independence, Missouri, to the Pacific coast. Having carried it for by years on that line, he applied to the Post-office Department, stating that during the Winter season the route was so difficult that it was next to impossible for him to carry it on on that route, and asking the privilege of carrying it during the Winter season, instead of on his own line by Carson Valley, down to the coast at San Pedro, and up the coast where there was a line of steamers to San Francisco, and up the Sacramento River by another line of steamers to Sacramento. The Department had given him permission to do that at his own request. It was a hard contract, as many other contracts at the same time were. Congress had relieved other contractors by allowing them specified amounts, but Mr. CHORPENNING had devised a bill worded so as to require the Department to adjust his claim on the basis of the papers on file in the House of Representatives. Mr. CHORPENNING's lawyer had arranged and secured these papers so as not to allow his application for permission to change the route to appear. At that time, an allowance of $75,000 was made by Postmaster-General BROWN. Applications upon the same ground made by CHORPENNING at different times afterward, under the joint resolution of last July, Postmaster-General CRESWELL allowed CHORPENNING additional compensation up the coast to San Francisco; from San Francisco to Sacramento; and from Sacramento to Carson City, at the rate of $50,000 a year. Postmaster-General CRESWELL had then, at the end of fifteen years, reviewed the evidence in which Postmaster-General BROWN had given extra compensation for extra weight of mails, notwithstanding that CHORPENNING had agreed on his contract to carry the mail whatever might be its weight, and allowed $236,000 additional on that. One item of $60,000 had been allowed on the simple letter of a postmaster to CHORPENNING, and why? Because the joint resolution required him to act upon the affidavits and proof on the files of the House of Representatives, and even the letter was found in the pocket of a member of Congress, were treated as being constructively on the files of the House. Another item of $100,000 had been allowed on a single affidavit of one of CHORPENNING's employes, without any opportunity to weigh the value of that testimony by cross-examination or inquiring into the grounds. Under the resolution of July 15, the sum of $443,000 had been allowed, of which sum $205,000 was allowed for profits that might have accrued from the contract for two years and twenty-five days that it had to run. In conclusion he said he did not make any charge against any officer, nor any member of Congress. He had merely undertaken to show the consequence of precipitate action by Congress. He did so for the double purpose, not only of recovering $443,000 from a man whom the officials of the Post-office Department declared to be entitled to not one red cent whatever, but also to warn himself and each and every other member of the House, the lesson which it should teach them to stop two things; first, to stop imposing on the Executive Department of the Government the adjusting of claims without permitting them the opportunity of examining witnesses; and second, to stop the putting through of claims in the manner in which they are put through without the House itself knowing what it was doing.

Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, said that while agreeing generally with the statement of the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, he believed that the Postmaster-General if not absolutely liable for what he had done, had acted with great negligence in the matter. He knew the claim to be a fraud. He knew the papers on the files of the House did not tell the whole truth, and it was his duty to report the facts back to Congress which was done in nearly three weeks before he made his awards. The man who was the managing counsel for CHORPENNING, Mr. EARL, had been the first Assistant Postmaster-General and the law partner and associate of Mr. CRESWELL, and it was on that account that he (Mr. BECK) had introduced a bill today prohibiting any employe in any of the Departments of the Government from practicing law in any such Department within five years after his retiring from it.

Mr. HILL, of New-Jersey, stated his connection with the Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads. The papers had been referred to him, and he had called on the Postmaster-General and ascertained that there were unsettled claims and probably some money due. On the statement furnished a report was drawn up, but so late that there was no time to submit it to the Committee. But at the last Congress an agreement was signed that he might report on the facts to the House, leaving the Postmaster-General to investigate the matter and do justice to all parties. Shortly after that he went home without making the report and there discussed the case. The joint resolution was introduced by Mr. CESSNA, another member of the Committee, who also drew up the report. He (HILL) had never supposed that there was any considerable sum due but only a small balance. He hoped that the resolution would prevail, so that a more thorough investigation might be made.

The joint resolution was passed.

WELCOME TO THE FENIAN EXILES.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, asked leave to introduce the following joint resolution:

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States in the name and on behalf of the people of the United States, give to J. O'Donovan Rossa, Thomas Clark Luby, John O'Leary, Thomas F. Burke, Charles Underwood, and John O'Connor, convicted Irish political prisoners, a cordial welcome to the capital, also the country, and a copy of this resolution be transmitted to them by the President of the United States.

Mr. BENJAMIN, of Missouri, objected.

Mr. BUTLER moved to suspend the rules, and said the resolution was copied from the Kossuth resolution.

The rules were suspended and the joint resolution passed—yeas 172, nays 21.

The following are the negative votes: Messrs. Ambler, Bailey, Benjamin of Missouri, Blair of Michigan, Churchill, Dixon of North Carolina, Dixon of Rhode Island, Ferriss, Gibbs, Harkins, Hoar, Jencks, Kelsey of New-York, Kinnip, Lamb, Peters, Pomeroy, Tabe, Tanner, Wheeler, Willard—21.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. BINGHAM, of Ohio, from the Judiciary Committee, made a report on the memorial of VICTORIA C. WOODHULL, asking that a declaratory law be passed by Congress; that under the Fifteenth Constitutional Amendment, women are entitled to vote. The report argues against the claim, and to the effect that if it is well founded the matter is within the jurisdiction of the Courts, and it recommends that the prayer of the petitioners be not granted. The report was laid on the table, and the Committee discharged from its further consideration.

The report was ordered to be printed and recommitted.

FREEDMEN'S BUREAU.

On motion of Mr. ARNELL, of Tennessee, the Committee on Education and Labor in the matter of the Freedmen's Bureau investigation, was made the special order for Tuesday, Feb. 14.

INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. ARMSTRONG, of Pennsylvania, from the Conference Committee on the bill for the sale of the Menomonee Indian lands, made a report which was agreed to.

A DAY FOR TERRITORIAL BUSINESS.

Mr. CULLOM, of Illinois, moved that the business of the Committee on Territories be made the special order for next Saturday.

Mr. RANDALL, of Pennsylvania, objected, unless there was an agreement that no bill should be acted upon to enable any of the Territories to come in as States.

Mr. CULLOM declined to make to make that condition, although the Committee had not yet authorized any such bill to be reported, and he moved to suspend the rules.

The rules were not suspended—yeas 128, nays [illegible], less than two-thirds in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. CAVANAUGH, of Montana, Saturday next was assigned for Territorial business, except bills for the admission of new States.

GEN. SHERMAN A REGENT.

On motion of Mr. FULAND, the Senate joint resolution for the appointment of Gen. WM. T. SHERMAN as a Regent of the Smithsonian Institute was passed.

The House then, at 5¼ o'clock, adjourned.

Alleged False Imprisonment.

The Kerrigan contempt case, of Hoboken, came up anew yesterday in the Hudson County Courts. PETER KERRIGAN sues Recorder FORE, of Hoboken, for $10,000 damages for false imprisonment. Two years ago KERRIGAN was arraigned before the Recorder for neglecting to clear the snow off his sidewalk, for which he was fined. This incensed KERRIGAN, and he insulted the Recorder, who committed him to the County Jail for contempt of Court.

Mr. KERRIGAN was brought before Judge BEDLE, on a writ of habeas corpus, who declined rendering a decision, as a precedent was involved of an important character. The case was subsequently argued before the Court of [illegible] Bilk, [illegible] when it was [illegible] Recorder had exceeded his authority in [illegible] commended proceedings against Recorder for damages [illegible] The case [illegible] thinking he had lost or injured the ordinance papers, feared he could not proceed, but they were found in the possession of the Recorder. The case attracts a good deal of attention in Hudson County.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Grievances of Brooklyn Tax-Payers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Believing the NEW-YORK TIMES to have a larger circulation in the City of Brooklyn than our local papers, and being also almost the only paper in these two cities free from the contaminating influence of the Ring, and as the Brooklyn papers refuse to let us ventilate our grievances through their columns, unless we write in the interest of the Water Board, we think we have the right to ask you to look to our interests, as you have taken up the championship of Right against Might.

On Monday last a committee called on the President of the Common Council of this city, requesting him to present a petition, mostly signed by widows and orphans, asking relief from an unjust and illegal assessment for repaving Atlantic-street with Belgian pavement, amounting to $23 25 per foot, or $600 on per lot. This person refused to present it and stated he should go against it. The next one, Alderman DUNN, then agreed to present it; but before the session of the Board he stated that he consulted with the rest of the Aldermen and the Corporation Counsel, and they decided not to present it; so he returned it to the petitioners. The reasons therefor are explained by the following resolution, passed unanimously at the same time:

Whereas, Certain property-owners on the line of Atlantic-street, between Clinton and Court, have been made, have remonstrated for the purpose of resisting the payment of such improvements.

Resolved, That the Law Committee inquire into the necessity of such improvements, and report as may be deemed necessary to the defense of the city.

That is, the unjust, unconstitutional and illegal acts of the Water and Sewerage Board, who have in one year paved twelve miles of streets in this city, with patented pavements, and in some cases three days after the street was newly graded and paved, repaved it with a tar pavement at $600 per lot. Of 6,000 lots 362 have signed petitions for stone pavement, and twelve for wood, and the wood pavement was put down. The extraordinary reasons for putting down and charging the lot owners for what they do not want, can be found in the act of April 2, 1870, which provides that on the completion of such improvement, the assessors shall assess the expense thereof, as may be fixed by the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners, including a reasonable allowance for interest, inspectors', and surveyors' fees, for fees for city officers, and three per cent. collection fees, and in addition thereto they are empowered to employ such and as many superintendents, subordinate officers and employes as may be necessary.

Is there a city official of any kind under this act that is not entitled to his share of the public plunder of the streets of this city which can be paved with the most costly material, at any cost, and as often as they please, and then become a lien on the property, holding priority over all incumbrances. EX-ALDERMAN.

A Nuisance.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you please inform the residents upon Madison-avenue by what authority the Madison-avenue Stage Company are permitted to run a snow-scraper on either side of the avenue, throwing the snow into the middle of the street and upon the sidewalk, for the convenience of their stages. It is now the most dangerous thoroughfare in the City. Carriages cannot stop before residences without running great risk of being crushed by these lumbering machines—fossils of the olden time—called omnibuses. If the Company would remove the snow after piling it up we would not complain, but left as it is, the important thoroughfare is sacrificed to the convenience of the Madison-avenue line of stages. Is there no remedy? A RESIDENT.

Steinway Hall.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Permit me to add my experience to that of the other two gentlemen who have complained of the janitor of Steinway Hall. Some time ago I conducted a concert in that Hall given for a well-known charity in this City. I told this fellow that my services were given gratuitously and that he could make no money out of the concern with my consent. This made him angry and his conduct was such that I was forced to complain of him to the gentleman in charge. This gentleman told me that he had many such complaints, and promised to write to Mr. STEINWAY, who was then in Europe. I never heard any more on the subject. Yours truly, G. S. M. W.

The Poor Blind.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It may not be generally known that the City for many years past has donated to each needy blind person the sum of $50 each yearly. This amount, small as it is, is the only donation of which we have received the direct and full benefit. We have learned to expect and depend on it to make up some of the deficiencies incident to our condition, in paying our rent, board, &c. The donation of $25,000 was made by the last Legislature as usual, and we were given every reason to believe we would receive the same amount this year. Application was made according to notice at the office of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction. We received from fifteen to twenty per cent. less than any year previous. Last year only $12,400 out of the $25,000 appropriated, was necessary to pay the applicants their $50 each. From what information we have we do not believe there has been its additional applicants to make up the deficiency, and if such be not the case it is probable that the blind have been taxed to help liquidate the deficiency of $6,000,000, said to exist, and of which the City officials can give no account. We would be obliged to Messrs. ALEXANDER FREAR & Co. for any light on the subject.

By publishing the above you will oblige your obedient servant, PETER SPRAGG,
No. 438 Ninth-avenue.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 26, 1871.

At Least.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The "Act for the establishment of a Spanish Inquisition in the State of New-York, for the suppression of heresy and other purposes," just introduced at Albany by Senator MICHAEL NORTON, is as diabolical and mischievous in its intention as it would be absurd and ridiculous in its practical operation. Whatever its fate may be at this session, it is of inestimable value as a declaration of the long-cherished purposes of that very large portion of our citizens who are permitted every privilege of citizenship without molestation, and pay for it by praying night and day against the fundamental institutions of the country, to wit: free speech, free Press, free knowledge, and by openly avowing their temporal and spiritual allegiance to a foreign potentate styled Pope of Rome, and their determination to avail themselves of their privileges here to overturn our institutions and convert them to his use and subject them to his power.

Fortunately for those who intend to practice religious liberty, and preach Christ as they understand His nature and mission, despite the opposition of the Roman Democratic Party, Senator MICHAEL NORTON, and those who have used him in this matter, have inherited the spirit of IGNATIUS LOYOLA without his genius. The eminent counsel who drew the act now proposed must have permitted his zeal for the Holy Church to obscure his knowledge of the State Constitution, and should this act become a law he would soon be compelled to admit that he and his spiritual advisers have begun their work at the wrong end. But if the Constitution did not contain the antidote for such hellish poison as NORTON's act, and the act did become a law, what pleasant and amusing consequences might there not flow from it. Leaving it able and more influential pens the task of attacking the act, and the spirit which dictates it, in a more serious mood, let me suggest some of the possible results of such a law upon society.

First—It would prevent evangelical religious instruction of the most elementary nature in every charitable institution in the land, public or private, except for such children as could be affirmatively proved to be of Protestant parentage.

Second—It would force into each and every of these institutions instruction in the Roman Catholic religion, this is the primary intent indeed of the act, i. e., to place all public institutions of charity in the hands of the Roman Catholics.

Third—It would prevent every individual who had a Roman Catholic servant under age, (not a Catholic,) from having prayers, family devotion, asking her for [illegible] and [illegible] AND JOHN [illegible] COULTER, by the Vice [illegible] to answer in behalf of bail.

PERSONAL, POLITICAL, AND GENERAL.

New-Lebanon, Ky., thinks it had a bit of an earthquake on the night of Jan. 19.

Mr. GRESHAM has decided to give his next great Fourth of July oration in June, 1871, in Boston.

The Senate of South Carolina has allowed the House of Representatives to withdraw its articles of impeachment against Judge T. O. P. VERNON, he having resigned his office.

The Democratic State Committee of New-Hampshire elected three days as their Chairman before they could find one to stick. There is not much fun in leading a party to defeat.

The members of the Bar in Louisiana have initiated a movement for the relief of the daughters of the late Chief-Justice TANEY, and will soon publish an address to the lawyers of the country, invoking assistance.

The census of Manilla, which has just been completed, shows that the population is less than 12,000. There are 5,000 widows and only 108 widowers.

Wisconsin intends to repeal the law granting a bounty for the killing of wolves, wildcats, &c., it having cost the State $15,000 last year. It is intimated that it paid for many animals killed in adjoining States.

The North Carolina Legislature has found a bill providing for a convention to revise the State Constitution. The election of members is to take place on the 24 of March, and the convention assembles on the 17th of April.

The American schooner Wamsutuck, which was seized and condemned on the charge of violating the Dominion fishery laws, was sold by order of the Court on the 24th inst., at Sydney, C. B., for $600, and the cargo and stores for $321.

Mayor FLANDRIN has ordered a careful survey of the theatres and amusement halls in New-Orleans, to see if sufficient facilities are afforded for egress in case of fire or panic from any cause.

About 3,000 persons, miners and others, in Ohio have petitioned the State Legislature to enact a law for the better regulation and ventilation of coal mines, and for the appointment of an Inspector of Mining, to see that the provisions of the law are faithfully carried out.

The Newport (R. I.) News thinks there can be no doubt that Gov. SPRAGUE was as loyal during the war as any man in the country, and it says so frankly, because it is unwilling to seek to the bitterness of party strife, to deprive even an opponent of the honors that are due him.

The Mobile Register believes that the South lost its Confederate life and independence through its refusal to put the negroes in the field as soldiers, and, in its judgment, had DAVIS, instead of LINCOLN, promulgated the Emancipation Proclamation, the war of secession would have triumphed.

We thought DANIEL WEBSTER was dead, but he still lives, if we may judge from this hint in a Mississippi paper: "If DANIEL WEBSTER, who is now speculating in Washington County, does not immediately let me hear from him in a satisfactory manner, I will publish him in the Pilot."

JOHN H. SIMPSON, a colored porter in the Detroit Post-office, has pleaded guilty to stealing letters therefrom. He has been employed about two years, but says he never took any letters until last Christmas, since which time he has occasionally helped himself when it was convenient.

Senator WINDOM was serenaded by his townsmen, in Winona, Minn., the other night. In responding, he said that, being a Republican of the Radical type, he expected to find that party equal to every emergency, and never faltering when defects are to be remedied, wrongs removed or wrongs righted.

The preliminary examination of Judge LINTON STEPHENS, of Georgia, on the charge of obstructing the execution of the Enforcement law, has ended in his being bound over in the sum of $8,000, to appear at the next term of the United States Circuit Court, to be held at Savannah, April 10.

A man named JACOB LIGHTER, who was arrested for some slight misdemeanor in Shelby, KY., has been recognized as a member of a gang of Ku-Klux who have been depredating in that State, and as he has confessed under the weight of testimony brought against him, it is likely to go heavily with JACOB LIGHTER. His arrest has also led to the detection of others of the gang.

New-Orleans has been rejoicing in continued warm weather, which has given quite an impetus to vegetation. The Picayune of Wednesday last says that already the violets were purpling the borders, and the lamarque and cloth of gold will soon be all abloom. The orange-trees, which many thought were killed, were giving evidences of life.

The Legislature of Tennessee has passed a bill modifying the law against carrying concealed weapons, making it discretionary with the Courts to fine or imprison persons thus offending. It is thought Gov. SENTER will veto it. The old law demands a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50, and imprisonment in jail for not less than thirty days nor more than six months.

Col. G. I. YOUNG, the member of the Ohio Legislature who died on Friday afternoon last as he was entering the State Capitol to take his seat in the House, had been for some time in poor health, but was heard to remark at his hotel, at noon, that he had not felt so well for a long time. He served as Military Secretary to Gov. TOD, and at the time of his death was editor of the New-Lisbon Buckeye State.

The report of the Superintendent of the public schools of Illinois gives some suggestive figures. We quote a few: Total salaries paid male teachers, $2,004,910 76; paid female teachers, $1,065,782 22. Average monthly salaries of males, $46 35; females, $26 68. Highest monthly wages paid males, $250; females, $120. Lowest monthly wages paid males, $12; females, $8 34. Average cost per scholar upon number enrolled, $8 88; upon daily attendance, $16 37.

At a dance in a private house in a small town in Illinois, on Thursday evening, Ryan Parsons, one of the guests, requested a young lady, who was sitting beside RILEY MACE, to move, as he wished to speak to the latter. The lady complied, and PARSONS drew his revolver and fired two shots at MACE, fatally wounding him. The murderer fled, and has not yet been arrested. There had long been a quarrel between the men.

The case of E. M. YERGER, charged with shooting Col. CRANE, Mayor of Jackson, Miss., came up in the Circuit Court, Judge BROWN, on Wednesday, on the argument of special pleas, which have been interposed by the prisoner's counsel. It was not completed. The Jackson Pilot says that the case has been badly managed from beginning, and can only result in expense to the State, without the conviction of the slaughterer. Able counsel are engaged on both sides.

The legal fraternity of Illinois held a large meeting in the State capital last week and appointed a committee to memorialize the Legislature to provide by law that all terms of the Supreme Court shall be held in Springfield. The Court is now held in three different places, and it is contended that money can be saved by the change, the Judges live more economically, and the Court have one good Court-house, one good library, and the convenience of having the records all at one place.

One of the Boston papers says that one day last week a young woman called at "Bolfin's Bower," (an admirable institution in Boston, the character of which was explained in the TIMES of Sunday,) and informed Miss COLLINS that she had just received intelligence that her mother was dying in a far-away country home, and that she was unable to go to her, having no money. Miss COLLINS sent a note to the Superintendent of the Boston and Maine Railroad, commending the case to his kindly consideration, and that gentleman gave the girl, and her sister also, passes and sent a telegram to Miss COLLINS, thanking her for [illegible] and [illegible] opportunity of showing his sympathy in the work in which he is commenced.

The New-Orleans Times, in a kindly article, criticizes the sodden taste and [illegible] criticism (whatever that may mean) which it declares to be characteristic of Northern literary men; ridiculous, likewise, the sensational tastes (whatever that may mean) it detects everywhere here; calls OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES and JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL "pleasant patterers." (whatever that may mean,) and winds up by declaring that "in all that BRAKESPEARE was a humorist, BEN HARTE may be, but certainly it is more as other Americans has yet done so pale that great master in affective handling of the pathetic." [illegible]

Prince ARTHUR, who, when in Canada, visited the Six Nation Indians, and was elected one of their Chiefs, has sent the tribe some lithographic portraits of Queen VICTORIA, the late Prince Consort and himself, to be hung in their council hall. The presentation was formally made on Wednesday last, when a large number of Indians and whites were present, and Chief Saxon JOHNSON, the aged Chief, presided. The surrounding of old pagans, who, it said, was the signal for three Indian whoops given with such vigor as to startle the pale faces, who were not anticipating such an expression of enthusiastic loyalty.

There is a good deal of human nature in people, after all. The New-Orleans Picayune hints at it when it says that quite a stir has been caused among the literati—and those who consider themselves such—in the Crescent City, by the announcement that a Mobile lady is now engaged in preparing a revised edition of the biographical sketches of Southern writers for the Press. The Pic. is amused to see how vexatious and prose-writers are striving with all their might to secure a place in the forthcoming volume, and it asserts that they cheerfully undergo the trouble of writing their own biographical sketches, and reviewing their own writings.

ALBERT PIKE was met in Vicksburg, Miss., a few weeks ago, by the editor of the Jackson Pilot, and the latter tells how he was struck, thus: "His long and luxuriant hair—gray with the frosts of many Winters—hung down in masses which almost covered his broad and stalwart shoulders. His eyes were clear and piercing. The element of poetry, which is so strongly recognizable in his character, shone very plainly, notwithstanding he was smoking a pipe of enormous construction, and whose strength and vileness would destroy the eyesight of ordinary men. He wore an old "slouch-hat," and his clothes were seedy, but he had that lordly air about him which his seedy clothing and careless habits could not disguise; a leonine aspect—the very face and front of Jove (as we remember Jove)."

LARGE FIRE IN NEWARK.

Schalk's Lager-Beer Brewery in Flames—Loss, $250,000.

Yesterday morning, at 5 o'clock, an alarm of fire in Newark called out the Newark Fire Department, through snow-drifts, to the scene of conflagration. SCHALK's lager-beer brewery, in Freeman-street, far out of the thickly-settled portion of the city, was threatened with immediate destruction, the flames—starting from the friction caused by the lowering and hoisting of an elevator—having already partially enveloped the main building. With surprising alacrity the fire companies were at work, and within a short time had been so far successful as to insure the safety of the adjoining buildings. The building had a fire-proof lower story, and this portion was not at all damaged. The three upper stories, filled with malt, were seriously damaged. The malt was destroyed.

The loss is not less than $250,000; $15,000 and the remainder on stocks. The property was insured for $150,000. Policies of $7,000 each are held by the proprietors in the International, Continental, Hanover, Home, North American, Germania, Fulton, Astor and Lafitte Companies, of New-York; $7,000 each in the Ocean, Mechanics' and City Companies, of Hartford; the North American, of Philadelphia; Pacific, of California; $5,000 each in the Union and Firemen's, of California. In Newark companies they hold the following amounts in policies: Mechanics' Mutual, People's, Newark City and Merchants', $7,000 each; Firemen's, Mutual, $14,000; New-Jersey and Mechanics', $5,000 each.

The building which was thus partially destroyed was square in form, constructed of brick, and four stories high, with a tower reaching another story, in which the large grain elevator was situated. The structure, together with the subsidiary buildings of the vast establishment, covers sixteen ordinary lots. The injured building was erected at a cost of $80,000, and contained fixtures worth $20,000, such as coolers, kettles, &c. The Schalk's lager-beer has employed to eighty men, and keep thirty horses. The capital stock engaged amounts to about $600,000. Although the supply of beer on hand is considered adequate for all present outstanding orders, still a great loss will accrue by a temporary suspension, as lager can be purchased much cheaper now than in Summer, when vast supplies of ice are indispensable. The SCHALK brothers are identified with the history of the great lager-beer trade of Newark. Their father first introduced its manufacture into that City in his brewery. Before the advent of the SCHALK family to Newark, lager was almost unknown as a beverage, and had only begun to be used in Philadelphia and New-York. At the beginning of Mr. SCHALK's adventure in the lager business, he brewed not more than ten barrels a week, which sold for $6 or $6 a barrel, and slowly rose at that price. The product now so highly prized by dairymen and farmers as a milk-producing food, were at that time regarded as useless—even injurious—and sold for ten cents a bushel.

BASE-BALL.

The Coming Champagnes of 1871.

We recently published a list of the professional club nines for 1871, in which was the name of the Mutual Club, of this City, as for as organized. We now give the complete nine of the forthcoming champion club for 1871, as furnished us by one of the Board of Directors of the Mutual Club, of which Mr. THOMAS COMAN is Chairman. The nine as it now is, includes Charles Mills, Joe Start, Robert Ferguson, Charles Smith, James White, John Hatfield, and Eggler and Patterson. This is unquestionably the strongest nine the Mutual Club ever placed in the field, and as it will be entirely controlled by Capt. FERGUSON, it will no doubt march through the campaign of 1871 with flying colors. Mr. Mills is a well-tested catcher, and a familiar as he is with WOLTERS' pitching, some of the most effective play may be expected at their hands this season. The support WOLTERS will have in the field will excel that of any nine in the country, inasmuch as START, FERGUSON and SMITH will occupy the bases, and their superiors in the business are not to be found. JAS. WHITE, the famous catcher of the Forest City nine of Cleveland of 1870, will play at short field and he is said to surpass even GEORGE WRIGHT in the position. The outfield will be the strongest in the country without exception, including as it does three such splendid fielders as HATFIELD, EGGLER and PATTERSON, and as the tenth man will be MARTIN, the famous medium-paced pitcher, a playing corps will be placed in the field which ought to win every game they play from May to November. Unquestionably with or Chicago or Cincinnati will stand a chance of securing any Mutual Club trophies this season, and though Washington, Philadelphia and Boston will strive hard to do so, we question whether even their strong nines will be able to succeed. But the new Mutual nine is not only strong in fielding, but is unequaled in batting strength. START led the averages of the Atlantic nine for 1870, WHITE that of the Cleveland nine, while the others were in the front rank for best averages of first-base hits in their respective nines. Then they have three splendid catchers in MILLS, WHITE, and FERGUSON, and three pitchers in WOLTERS, MARTIN, and FERGUSON, the latter being an old pitcher, and one quite effective for a change of delivery. The Mutual Club will occupy their old grounds—CAMMEYER's Union Ball-grounds, Brooklyn—and a new club-room is to be fitted up for them. The Club, with its new nine, will take an early tour South preparatory to commencing play in this vicinity. The Club is now ready for challenges for the season of 1871. Certainly the crank club of our Metropolis never entered upon a season under such propitious circumstances as they will the coming season of 1871. The Board of Directors, we notice, includes Messrs. COMAN, MCCONNELL, GOERT, and HAYES.

THE TAYLOR WILL.

Proceedings Yesterday—Mr. Taylor Last Illness—Force and Influence—Testimony of His Attending Physician—Other Important Evidence to Establish the Will.

The proceedings in the matter of the contested will of JAMES B. TAYLOR, deceased, before Surrogate HUTCHINGS, were not continued as great length yesterday, owing to the fact that several witnesses who were expected to be present were unavoidably absent. The most interesting and important evidence elicited was that of Dr. QUACKENBOS, the physician who attended the deceased during his last illness. In his testimony he stated certain facts tending to corroborate the execution of the disputed will. Several other witnesses were also examined but exactly on the points as to the mental condition and the signature and on the question of handwriting. The following is a report of the day's hearing in the case:

DR. HENRY F. QUACKENBOS, examined by Mr. ANDREWS, testified: I am a doctor of Medicine, New York, and regular M. D. in these Republican states; have been in the practice of surgery and medicine for thirty years; was intimately with the deceased, JAMES B. TAYLOR, since 1848, and was for some time his family physician; I attended Mr. TAYLOR five times; he was never confined at the Manhattan House in consequence; our relations were always of a very friendly character and for two years prior to his death he consulted me frequently in regard to his health; about twelve months before his decease, I discovered he was permanently diseased with Bright's disease, but I never intimated to him the fact to him; last September he visited me during the months of June and July, while his wife and granddaughter were in Europe; on the 17th of August I was called upon to attend him in his last illness, and remained with him until his death; about the early part of July he visited me, and, pointing to his heart, said, "Here is my trouble," he explained, also, yesterday by saying that there was a valve there which was killing him; that his granddaughter, the only relative he had left in the world, had run away and married against his consent, and to the only one in the world whom he would not wish to call son-in-law; I told him to make the best of the matter, as it was now irretrievable, and he replied, "Yes, I will, and I will do it." Personal and only related KATE for her money; Messrs. TRACEY, RICHMOND, WELLS, and others were constant in our visits to Mr. TAYLOR during his last sickness; on the morning of the 12th of August, Mr. TAYLOR expressed a desire to go to his office the next day, as he had some important business to transact; I asked him why he should not let Mr. RICHMOND or Mr. TRACEY do for him, and he said he only could attend to it; on the following day, he was perfectly wild about going to the office, and said there was a paper there he wanted; I asked JAMES B. TAYLOR; the ensuing day he said he should go to his office, if he were to be carried there; on a stretcher; he did not tell me the nature of the paper, for I never asked; I refused to allow him to leave his room; was present in the room when he died; Thursday prior to his death I asked him if his business arrangements were perfected, as life was uncertain; he replied that they were, for his will was made and his affairs were in a satisfactory condition; I heard a conversation between Mr. TAYLOR and Mr. TRACEY respecting business; Mr. TAYLOR said, "Mr. RICHMOND and Mr. TRACEY were in the Bizarre; Mr. TAYLOR became uneasiness about two o'clock on Monday, and Prof. CLARKE was called in at evening, physician; later in the day; Mrs. TAYLOR and her granddaughter arrived from Europe; the latter should not come to the room, and the latter did not visit him; he recognized her immediately, and spoke to her, but I did not catch the subjects of their conversation; when Mrs. HOWLAND the elder came in, Mr. TAYLOR had not spoke to her; neither did any words pass between himself and his granddaughter; the latter left the room; I made inquiries and ascertained that this was about half past three o'clock; he mumbled something after that, but I could not understand what; I made known to him the arrival of the family, and he asked if they were all well; he then exclaimed somewhat excitedly and when addressing his wife.

Cross-examined by Mr. CLINTON—When I first saw Mrs. HOWLAND on the day of Mr. TAYLOR's death her daughter-in-law was with her; I did not request my one to go for KATE, for I never knew the young lady. (Nothing else of importance was developed, the main portion of the evidence being confined to the condition of the death of Mr. TAYLOR.)

Mr. HENRY C. MATTHESON, examined by Mr. ANDREWS, testified: I reside in New-York; I am Secretary of the Brunswick and Albany Railway, of Connecticut, of which Mr. TAYLOR was a director; I am familiar with the signature of Mr. TAYLOR; I know his bank-writing; (will answer) I should think the signature was Mr. TAYLOR's; I have no doubt about it.

Cross-examined by Mr. CLINTON—I cannot recognize the handwriting in the body of the will; I don't know if I looked at Mr. TAYLOR's; I have received a number of letters from the deceased; letters of Mr. TAYLOR's shown; I should say that this was Mr. TAYLOR's handwriting; I am prepared to say I should think he wrote this letter; the more I look at it, however, I think perhaps it is not the writing; I should say it is; I change my opinion.

WM. E. EVERT, the last witness called yesterday, testified: I live at the Metropolitan Hotel; became acquainted with Mr. TAYLOR in 1867; we were associated at the Commercial together; I was associated with the deceased in the Pacific Railway matter; I have seen Mr. TAYLOR write a good many times; that was some; particularly acquainted with his signature, having seen him indorse a good many notes; (will answer) I should think it was the signature; I know the signature; I am aware of it that it is not a forged one; I used to see with the signature attached, and I had the money.

Question by Mr. ANDREWS—Has Mr. CLINTON shown you a specimen of a genuine copy of the will signature? Objected to. Objection sustained.

There was no cross-examination of the witness. The case was adjourned to 10 A. M. today. The Surrogate, in consenting to an adjournment, remarked that he was most anxious that no further delay should occur, as other cases of importance were pending, and he intimated that he could assign no day until this case was disposed of. Expedition in the production of witnesses was strongly urged.

The New City Census—Population of the Seventh and Twenty-First Wards.

The census returns for the Seventh and Twenty-first Wards were received at Marshal BEARN's office yesterday. The following table shows the population of both Wards:

How She Loved Him and How He Repaid Her—A New-Jersey Tale of Woe.

A few weeks since a painter doing business in New-York, named CASPER RAPP, went to board in Hoboken with an interesting widow named Mrs. STEINBOCKER. The fair landlady has a fairer daughter rejoicing in the historic cognomen of ELIZABETH, for whom the disciple of RAPHAEL felt or feigned a flame, which was honestly and demonstratively reciprocated by the bewitching LIZZIE. After "treading the primrose path of dalliance" for a time, a formal matrimonial contract was entered into, intimation of the same of the paternal grey regarding bills of his board bill, till the amount had run up. Disliking or unable to pay the sum, RAPP wrapped himself in his entire wardrobe and fled to New-York, where he found another boarding-house and another lady-love. A few weeks ago, however, he accidentally broke his leg, which fact coming to the ears of his whilom lodging-her sex's instinctive sympathy for misfortune was aroused, and by promises of free board and loving offices, the facile RAPP was persuaded to return to Hoboken, where for six weeks he shared the widow's cot and was nursed by the self-sacrificing daughter with all that alacrity which characterized the performance of a labor of love. When he became convalescent, the knight of the easel was ungenerous enough to Mrs. STEINBOCKER and traitorous enough to her too-confiding daughter, to "fold his tent like the Arab, and silently steal away" to New-York, leaving his board bill unsettled, and the young lady's heart in a very bereaved condition. Naturally the landlady became wrath with RAPP, and yesterday sued him for the full amount, $[illegible], before Justice COMSTOCK. RAPP contended he ought only to pay what was due when he first left the widow's house, but the Justice could not see the justice of such a suggestion, and a verdict for the full amount was rendered.

POLICE TRIALS.

New Superiors Are Committed with Almost the Best Watch-Box Eloquence.

Commissioner ROSEBOOM yesterday investigated a large number of complaints against policemen, of which only a few were of public interest.

During the night of the 20th inst. a burglary was committed at No. 240 Broadway, the entrance having been made from a barber-shop below the store, and the burglars having forced open the door into the store from which they took cloths, peyeri and doeskins valued at $[illegible]. It was shown that there was a light burning in the store, so there always is, and as the burglary must have occupied considerable time, Capt. ROBERTS, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, made a complaint against Sergeant SAMPSON and Patrolmen MOSES MASON and CARTER, who covered the post in turn during the time it must have been demolished, for neglect of duty in not discovering and preventing it. They all swore they tried the door of the store every time they passed, and found it fast. The charge should rather be that a wall slum out the entrance to the burglars, which fact, when so that they could not see that it had been tampered with. The case was referred to the Board.

Patrolman WILLIAM MATHEWS, of the Seventh Precinct, was charged with improper conduct by one Patrick GARRETY, of No. 108 Tenth avenue, who told a woeful tale of how the officer had abused him in response to a civil inquiry as to how his eye had been injured; and he further testified that the officer was drunk. But Capt. McDERMOTT testified that MATHEWS was a sober man, and there was a very bad character in the neighborhood where the alleged misconduct of MATHEWS occurred.

Sergeant WILLIAM WILSON and Sergeant of the Fifth Precinct were charged with neglect of duty in not discovering and preventing a burglary committed during the night of the 19th inst., at No. 70 Franklin-street, where the building was entered by a second-story front window, and sixty-six pieces of silk were stolen therefrom. The officers in question stay from 8 in the evening until 6 in the morning were positive the work was not done during their tours, and the weight of evidence was to the effect that it was done during the dog-watch, about 1 o'clock, when, as Sergeant WILSON remarked that the "dog-watch" had given every opportunity to burglars, and he had been always opposed to it, but had not succeeded in having it abrogated. The case was referred to the Board.

Patrolman PATRICK, also of the Fifth Precinct, was charged with neglect of duty in not discovering a burglary committed between 12 and 4 o'clock on Sunday morning of the 22d inst., when a pane of glass was broken in the window of the tailor-shop at the south-west corner of Canal-street and Broadway, and cloths valued at $[illegible] stolen through the aperture by the burglars putting hands through it. It was shown that the burglary must have been performed in a few minutes by a skilled burglar, and the case was referred to the Board.

LAW REPORTS.

COURT CALENDERS—THIS DAY.

COURT OF APPEALS.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

The Supreme Court yesterday rendered the following decisions:

No. 27.—The Merchants' National Bank of Boston vs. The State National Bank of Boston.—Error to the Circuit Court for Massachusetts.—The plaintiffs claim that the defendants, through their cashier, contracted to purchase of the plaintiffs in 1867, coin and coin certificates of the value of $600,000; that the delivery of the coin and certificates was made under the contract, and that the cashier of the defendants delivered to the plaintiffs therefor certified checks at defendants' bank, drawn by a firm known as Mellen, Ward & Co., for whose account they directed the purchase to be made, of the coin and certificates, and promised to pay them on presentment, but upon presentation of the checks payment was refused. This suit was for the money. The Court instructed the jury to find for the defendants, holding that the power to certify checks of third persons, in behalf of the corporation is not inherent in the office of a cashier of a national bank; nor is the exercise of such a power within the scope of his usual and ordinary duties; and that the National Currency act, not having conferred any such authority upon the cashier, his certificate did not bind the bank on the account for goods sold and delivered. It was held that there was no evidence of such a sale to the defendants, the view being taken that Mellen, Ward & Co. in the transaction, were the purchasers, and were the debtors to the plaintiffs. The cause was argued last Spring in this County, and was now decided.

Mr. Justice SWAYNE delivered the opinion. On all the questions it is held that the facts should be properly submitted to the jury, and on the subject of the authority of the cashier to bind the bank by his acts, the Court, in substance, say that by all authorities, English and American, a check may be accepted, and that by the law of mercantile in this country, the certification by the bank that the check is good, is equivalent to acceptance, and is an undertaking that it shall remain good. This agreement is as binding on banks as notes of circulation, and the transferee of such a check takes it with the same sense of security that he would the notes of the bank. The certifying bank, it is said, without doubt, intended these consequences, and it is accordingly liable. To hold otherwise would render these important securities a snare and delusion. The power conferred on the cashier invests him with the same authority to certify a check as he has to receive the money of the depositor, as the power is inherent in the office. The cashier is the executive officer of the bank, and conducts all its financial operations, and persons dealing with the bank have a right to rely upon the integrity of its officers when acting within the apparent sphere of their duties. And the bank is bound accordingly. The opinion, which is very elaborate, sustains the plaintiff in all points, and reverses the judgment.

Mr. Justice CLIFFORD dissented, and read a very lengthy opinion maintaining the theory of the Court below. Mr. Justice DAVIS concurs with Mr. Justice CLIFFORD.

Error to the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.—This is an action of ejectment to recover certain lands in Schuylkill County, Penn., formerly the property of Brobst, but which Mr. Gibson, from the defendants in error, by virtue of a mortgage made by Brobst to Wood, claims to have in his possession. The Court below sustained the title of the defendants in error. The cause was brought here for review, the plaintiff in error claiming that the Court below erred in its instructions to the jury on various points, the judgment to be reversed, the Court holding that in two of the exceptions taken, inquire as to the soundness of these instructions, but the Court with other defenses which were immaterial. Where there are various exceptions, the Court refuses to take up a charge of the Court below, and reversal of the case and sending back to the trial, the jury, upon the ground that it would be a waste of time, and a mere form, for a new trial, if it be certain that the plaintiff cannot recover in the action. Mr. Justice Swayne delivered the opinion.

Appeal from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York.—Mr. Justice MILLER delivered the opinion of the Court, dismissing the writ of error.

No. 140.—Mesenger vs. Ware.—Error to the Supreme Court of Iowa.—Mr. Justice MILLER delivered the opinion of the Court, dismissing the writ of error.

Appeal from the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New-York.—Mr. Justice MILLER delivered the opinion of the Court, dismissing the appeal.

No. 1. (original).—Amount in controversy, which has been on argument since Thursday last, was then proceeded with. The case will probably occupy the Court for a day or two yet.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—KINGS COUNTY.

Before Judge Benedict.

MOTION TO QUASH IN THE DOGART BRIDGE-STREET CASE.

The United States vs. Robert D. Bogart.—This case has been up in various forms for the last year. The defendant is accused of embezzling $30,000 while employed as Pay-master's clerk on board the receiving-ship Vermont. Yesterday the counsel for the defense moved to quash the indictment, and argued that the indictment described defendant as a person having the charge of the United States funds in the Navy, and that, therefore, he was triable only by a Court-martial, and that a Civil Court had no jurisdiction over him. Also, that the Court had no jurisdiction, because the offense was committed on board the Vermont while it was in the Southern District instead of the Eastern District of New-York.

On the part of the Government it was argued that while he might be tried by Court-martial, he could also be tried by the Civil Courts, as the offense was one cognizable under the general laws of the United States. Also, that the act instituting this district gives this Court concurrent jurisdiction over all matters in the waters of New-York Bay. The papers were taken and decision reserved.

Assistant District-Attorney CAITLIN for the Government, Judge BERGH for the defendant.

WHAT CONSTITUTES AN ACT OF COURT.

The United States vs. Thomas Jensen.—At the opening of the Court, Mr. Clayton, Attorney for the defendant, said that upon further investigation he was convinced of the propriety of the ruling of the Court in this case, which was tried on Saturday, and which formed the subject of an exception and motion set down for argument this morning. The Court ruled in that case, which was a charge of Mail Robbery, that the jury of the trial and waiting each impanelled was an act of voting. As the jury on Friday brought the prisoner in guilty with recommendation to mercy, the counsel submitted the case, hoping that such mercy would be exercised. The prisoner has not yet been sentenced.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Chief-Justice Ingraham, and Judges Barnard and Cardozo.

USURY.

Charles Abernethy vs. George T. Knight.—This was an action to recover $2,381 43, as a balance of a loan of $5,000, and the decision involved the question of usury. It appeared that the loan was made without any fixed rate of any at all interest being agreed upon. It was agreed, however, that in consideration of the loan, the borrower, who was using the money to go into business, agreed to give the lender for its use three per cent on the amount of his bills. The proceedings was found to be about seven per cent on the amount loaned, and defendant claimed that payments made under the contract had liquidated the debt. The case was heard before the Referee, who gave judgment for the plaintiff. Now, on appeal from the referee's decision, the Court has affirmed the judgment, holding that the contract was not usurious.

John H. Whiting for defendant and appellant; Thomas Allison, of Averill, Allison & Averill, for plaintiff and respondent.

NOTICE TO THE BAR.

That no appeals on the general calendar will be heard at the February term. A motion calendar of appeals from interlocutory and motions will be heard for that term. Notes of issue must be filed with the Clerk before Thursday, Feb. 9, next.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.—JAN. 30.

Before Judge Sutherland.

THE POWER REPLEVIN—RECEIVER'S FEES.

Elizabeth E. Bowne vs. John Lawrick and Harmon B. Duryea, Executors, &c.—This was a motion for the settlement of an order confirming the referee's report, fixing the amount of the receiver's compensation. The matter involved is the estate of Robert H. Bowne, deceased, amounting to over $2,000,000, and frequently reported in the columns of the TIMES. Mr. James M. Sweeny was appointed receiver, and during a year in which he held the office, he received $10,000 rents. The case was referred to Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., to audit the receiver's accounts, who reported in favor of Mr. Sweeny for a fee of $6,000. To this amount Mr. Evarts, counsel for the executors, objected to as being exorbitant. After argument, Judge Sutherland took the papers and reserved his decision.

Mr. Bangs for motion; Mr. Evarts opposed.

KINGS COUNTY—SUPREME COURT.

Before Judge Pratt.

THE EXECUTION OF A WORTHLESS BOND.

George Wrinkler vs. Charles Cooper and Jane Wood.—This was an action to recover $6,119 for damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff through the neglect of the defendants to execute and deliver to him a proper deed of conveyance for certain lots of land situated in the Ninth, Sixteenth and Nineteenth Wards of Brooklyn.

The defendants in their answer acknowledge the title as alleged in the complaint, but aver that the plaintiff was bound by the terms of the sale to pay, on the day of sale, forty per cent of the purchase money, besides the ten per cent, auctioneer's fees, which he did pay, and also to execute and deliver to defendants a bond and mortgage, covering the premises sold, and to pay the balance of the purchase money. These conditions they state he did not comply with, although the defendants executed a deed of conveyance and separately tendered it to the plaintiff, who absolutely refused to have anything to do with the property.

A number of witnesses were examined on both sides, including the plaintiff and the auctioneer who sold the premises. Plaintiff's counsel, also offered in evidence the assessment roll of Flushing avenue, to show the value of the property. Mr. Cooper, one of the defendants, was a witness for the defense, but his examination was confined to the simple recovery. The case was then put to the jury, a verdict was rendered for plaintiff.

D. P. Barnard and W. L. Gill for plaintiff; Thos. J. Jackson and Ed. Judge Reynolds for defendant.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART I.

Before Judge Larremore and a Jury.

INTERESTING IRELAND BILL CASE.

Whitham et al. vs. Hagart.—This action was brought upon a draft accepted by the defendant and payable to the order of one Ed. L. Rouvier. The defense was an allegation of a mistake in the amount and a general denial. When the trial was commenced a motion was made to dismiss the complaint, because it was not alleged that the acceptance was in writing, and because it was not averred that the payee had indorsed the draft or assigned it. The motion was denied. The draft was then received in evidence and a witness testified to the value of $[illegible] Counsel for the defendants then insisted that the case should be dismissed because it appeared that the draft was not indorsed or assigned, that the plaintiffs were not proven to own the draft, and that the draft was not protested. After argument, the Court submitted the case to the jury who returned a verdict for the plaintiffs for $627 in gold. A motion was then made to set aside the verdict upon the foregoing grounds and to expunge the words "in gold" from the verdict. The Court denied the motion, and judgment was entered for plaintiffs.

Gen. R. A. Prior for plaintiffs; Alex. H. Reavey for defendants.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

Sales at the Stock Exchange—JAN. 30.

FIRST BOARD.

[illegible]

SECOND BOARD.

[illegible]

MONDAY, Jan. 30—P. M.

The surrender of Paris caused an advance in Gold and Exchange here, and a decline in the English Funds in London. The theory is that the vast sums of Continental Money sent to London last Summer, on the outbreak of War, for safekeeping, will now be called home, for employment in the old channels. This may prove partially correct, but it is very questionable whether there will be any haste in the operation, and the further suggestion seems that the demand upon the English markets for supplies of various kinds to replenish the exhausted stores of France may prove quite as important as the drafts upon London for Gold. The sales of Gold here advanced to 111@111¼ ⅌ cent, and Bills on London were advanced to 109¾@109⅞ ⅌ cent. There was more animation in the Gold Room than for some days previous, but not an over-confident feeling in regard to the rise in price. The Public Funds of the United States advanced on Saturday's sales, and nearly all descriptions, 5-20s and 10-40s, were in demand. The announcement from the Treasury at Washington that the February purchases of 5-20s have been increased to $2,000,000 every Wednesday, making $8,000,000 for the month, also helped the market, which is now over-supplied at present with 5-20s of any description.

The Railway market was somewhat irregular in temper, and with the exception of Lake Shore the early speculation was tame, as about Saturday's last quotations. Later, the New-York Central Stock and Scrip were better, and the North-west and St. Paul firm. On the Miscellaneous list, Pacific Mail was higher, and there was a moderate show of business in Western Telegraph, Quicksilver, &c. The Pacific Railway Bonds advanced to 91 ⅌ cent for Centrals, and the advance in Unions to 79@80 ⅌ cent was sustained.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made, as compared with Saturday night. The Money market worked easy at 6@7 ⅌ cent to the Brokers, on call, Stock collateral, and 5@6 ⅌ cent on Gold. The amount of business in Bills on London at the advanced rate was not important on the Street, but this has little to do with the private settlements between the importers and Bankers, for London Credits heretofore granted and falling due about 1st of February.

The Customs demand for Gold today amounted to $[illegible]. The price in the Gold Room, at the close of business, was 111 ⅌ cent.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

M. JULES FAVRE has transmitted an official telegram to the Government at Bordeaux announcing the signing of the armistice and the treaty of capitulation. The elections will be held Feb. 8, and the National Assembly will meet at Bordeaux Feb. 12. A member of the Paris branch of the Government will leave at once for Bordeaux. The German occupation of the forts about Paris was unattended by any incidents of more than ordinary interest. Fifty-three millions of francs in the contribution imposed upon Paris by the articles of capitulation. A Versailles telegram says a cordon has been drawn around Paris, and egress and ingress is by permit from the German authorities. The revictualing of the city will be made under supervision of German officers. Peace is confidently regarded by them as secured. The German troops are bitterly disappointed at not being permitted to enter the city.

A Basle telegram says numbers of Gen. BOURBAKI's army are crossing the eastern frontier at Meusebourg in Baden and Pruntrut in Switzerland. Gen. CHANZY has at length been heard from. His head-quarters are at Laval, and his army occupy Vierson, Bourgee and Nevers. The course of instruction contain 250,000 men it is said, and the conscription of 1871 will add 300,000 to that number. A Bordeaux dispatch says that at the termination of the armistice France will resume the war with 900,000 men.

Measures are to be taken in Boston for an organized effort toward the relief of the suffering population of France. In San Francisco the fall of Paris created but little emotion. The Germans there are preparing for a demonstration of joy.

YZQUIERDO has been appointed Governor of the Philippine Islands by the King of Spain.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, several memorials were presented in favor of the establishment of a homeopathic university at Washington. Several bills were reported from committees, but not disposed of. After the morning hour had expired, the day was spent on the question of admitting the Senators from Georgia. Mr. TRUMBULL argued in favor of the majority report of the Judiciary Committee, declaring in favor of Mr. HILL's claims, but pronouncing MILLER ineligible. Mr. STEWART urged the adoption of the minority report in favor of FARROW and WHITELEY, and Mr. THURMAN advocated the claims of Mr. MILLER. Mr. STEWART's proposition was rejected by a vote of 19 to 38. No other vote was reached at the hour of adjournment.

In the House several new bills were introduced. Among these was one prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to any civil, military or naval officer of the Government, and making the penalty of intoxication on the part of Government employes prompt dismissal from the service; and one to regulate commerce among the several States. The latter provides for a general law under which railroads, canals and other highways from one State to another, may be established and operated. The rest of the morning hour was consumed in the reading of bills, and by dilatory motions to stave off the consideration of the New-York and Washington Air Line Railroad. Then the claims of Mr. CHAMPERNOWNE, a mail contractor, were considered, and the joint resolution passed at the last session for an adjustment of his accounts was repealed. A resolution was adopted welcoming the Fenian exiles, and a report made from the Judiciary Committee adverse to the claims of women for the franchise under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. Next Saturday was fixed upon as a day to be devoted to Territorial business, and the Senate resolution appointing Gen. WM. T. SHERMAN one of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institute was passed. This closed the day's proceedings.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Both branches held sessions last night. In the Senate the bill authorizing the taking of additional lands and waters for the Croton Aqueduct, New-York, was reported. The bills to revise acts relating to public instruction, and to incorporate the American Home Missionary Society, were passed. The resolution was adopted to elect, on the 8th of February, Regents of the University, in place of GUNDER HAWLEY and ROBERT GARRIGUES, deceased. The bill prescribing the manner of electing town officers in Richmond County was ordered to a third reading, and the Senate adjourned. In the Assembly bills were introduced to prevent fraud in the sale of coal in New-York; providing that all sales of real estate in New-York under decree of any Court shall be made by the Sheriff, except when that official is interested; authorizing the City of Troy to take water from the Hudson for city use; to erect a new county from part of Steuben, and to incorporate a New-York railroad company, and authorizing them to lay a double track on the west side of the city to Spuyten Duyvil Creek and back to Skinneraet. The bill increasing the pay for publishing the Session laws to fifty cents a folio uniformly was ordered to a third reading; also the bill fixing the compensation of Supervisors was ordered to a third reading, and the House adjourned.

GENERAL.

The President, yesterday, sent to Congress a message accompanying the proceedings of the Council of Indian tribes, held at Okmulgee in December, at which a declaration of rights and a constitution for their government was adopted, together with a copy of the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the views of the Secretary of the Interior thereon. The President does not think it would not be advisable to receive the new Territory with the constitution as it is now framed, as Congress should hold the power of approving or disapproving of all legislative action by the Territory, and the Executive should have the power to appoint the Governor, Judicial and other officers, as long as it remains a Territory. He recommends as close an adherence to their wishes as is consistent with safety.

The steamer Kensington, from Savannah, Ga., was sunk in a collision with the bark Jasper recently, about sixty miles north-northeast of Hatteras. The crew and passengers of the Kensington were picked up by the steamer Georgia, off Body Island, and taken to Charleston, S. C. The bark Jasper was supposed to have sunk with all on board save one, but it was afterward found that she had been towed into Hampton Roads.

The Cause of Local Misgovernment.

The Troy Times says, as everybody says, and what is quite true, that the honest men in this State are in a majority, and that if they wish to save Troy and other cities from the plunderers, all they have to do is "to let partisanship slide, and to unite in Troy and everywhere else in putting the right sort of men in office." We are sorry to say we hardly think the enunciation of this proposition does much to help us out of our difficulties. Most people are familiar with it, but it has thus far affected the political course of very few. It has long been quite clear that so long as the honest men of this City allowed themselves to be divided on municipal questions by their diversity of views on Federal questions, they would never get the better of the common enemy. The fact is that the Tweedites have, as we pointed out the other day, been able to build up their power, mainly owing to the preoccupation of the public mind by the anti-slavery struggle. Federal questions must always have a great advantage over local questions, owing to their breadth and scope, and to the vast size of the community which takes a common interest in them—owing in short to their being national questions. But during the last ten years this advantage has been enormously increased by the war and the questions arising out of the war. Whether the Union was to be or not to be; if it was to be, what kind of Union, and how maintained and paid for—are topics which, as long as men are men, must have more attraction for people than the government of a single city, even if it be the City we live in. The consequence is that it has been of late years difficult in an unusual degree to get good men who differed about the government of the United States to unite about the government of New-York.

TWEED and his friends have, of course, taken advantage of this. The knaves are not divided by Federal questions. Indeed, about Federal questions they do not care one straw. They would like, perhaps, to put one of their own men in the Presidential chair, so as to transfer some of the operations of the Ring to Washington; but even about this we suspect few of them are very anxious. They are not politicians in any good sense of the word. Few, if any of them, have any ideas or questions of policy. Whether slavery, or the Union, or the tariff lasts, or does not last, is very nearly the same to them. The Alabama claims and the fishery difficulties they view with complete indifference. They are interested in no system of taxation except that of New-York City. The income tax they do not pay, and, therefore, do not care whether it is abolished or not; and so on through the whole range of subjects over which Congress has jurisdiction. Of money they are fond, and they have so arranged things in New-York that they can get nearly as much money as they please. Their quarrels among themselves are only temporary, and are almost always about the manner in which the plunder is divided. When we hear of a division among these, such as occurred last year, it is never caused by a difference of opinion on a public question, but always by the dissatisfaction of some active politician with his share of the spoils. He begins active opposition to the others as soon as he finds there is no other way of bringing them to terms, but they invariably "settle" with him as soon as he becomes too troublesome, and he once more relapses into obscurity, and becomes an invisible but zealous worker for the common interest.

This absence of opinions and convictions of course gives them an enormous advantage over the honest portion of the community. Many a laugh they have doubtless had since 1860 over the heat and passion with which honest Democrats and Republicans were fighting over the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, the Civil Rights act, the impeachment, and the whole process of reconstruction. And many a laugh they will have so long as Federal questions are so absorbing as to prevent cordial co-operation on municipal affairs between people who own honestly-acquired property. Of course, the ideal state of things would be one in which people would act on municipal matters without reference to their opinions on Federal matters, and we do not despair of seeing a very close approach to it. The great obstacle to it now is the blind persistence of the Democrats in opposing or seeking to overturn the results of the war. As long as they display this spirit, Republicans will stand on guard against them, and co-operation, even against thieves, will be difficult if not impossible. The questions which brought on the war, and have been raised by the war, are of too vast moment to permit those who fought the war out, and struggled to secure its fruits by legislation, to submit to any trifling with them, or act cordially with any one who is trying to upset them, for any purpose whatever. But the new Federal questions which are coming up are not of a nature to divide the public as the old ones divided it. They cannot possibly become so exciting, and will, therefore, not interfere as the old ones did with the work of local reform. Nobody will ever say that he does not care how much TWEED or SWEENEY plunder him so long as he can keep down the duty on pig-iron, or prevent the loan of the Government credit to the Oshkosh Central Railroad. When the City revenue gets up, as it nearly has already, to the level of the Federal expenditure for civil purposes, and it becomes a question whether a man can carry on business in the City at a fair profit or not, the government of the City of New-York must become to those who live in it one of the most momentous of all subjects, and whenever this happens the honest men will readily combine to outvote the rogues.

The great and the first thing to be done now is to convince people that the rogues are really in a minority. Of course, when you state this to anybody as an abstract proposition, he consents in it at once; the community could not last, he says, if it were not so. Nevertheless, in practice, people can hardly be got to believe it, so accustomed are they to see the rogues come off victorious, and so doubtful are they as to anything like co-operation or discipline among the respectable. It is this mutual distrust which works most of our woes. To get rid of it is the first step in reform.

An Act to Make Religion Hereditary.

We trust that the animated debate in the State Senate of Friday last did not escape our readers' attention. It arose on a bill presented by Senator NORTON, which ought to be entitled an "Act to make religion hereditary among the children of the vagrant classes." No more remarkable law, bearing on topics of this nature, we venture to say, was ever proposed in any legislative assembly. We have, as our City readers are aware, an "Established Church" in New-York, supported in large part by the State. This Church, as the late Italian meeting showed, controls the great body of the politicians, besides having an absolute rule over the ignorant classes. There was one field, however, in which it was losing ground, usually the best of all fields for priestcraft—that is among the immense multitude of destitute, abandoned, and criminal children which are left by European immigration and the misfortunes of a large city, drifting through our streets. Here the living spirit of humanity which pervades the Protestant sects, had been laboring with great devotion and earnestness for many years. On all sides in our City, institutions of benevolence for this unfortunate class had sprung up. We have had our Houses of Refuge, our Juvenile Asylums, our Houses of Industry, Industrial Schools and Newsboys' Homes. These simple and humble charities have worked in a broad and unsectarian way. They have never taught dogmas, or sought to proselytize, but have sheltered and fed and instructed without reference to creed or race. They have been remarkably successful, and their ingenious efforts and practical results have been an honor to the City. The most useful of all their labors has unquestionably been the removal of abandoned children to homes in the country.

This particular effort of benevolence it is the design of Senator NORTON's bill to utterly prohibit. Any institution for the care or reception of minors who are either destitute or criminal, in indenturing or disposing of them in places in the country, is obliged to require a written obligation from the employer that he "will not interfere with the religious belief which such child may have received from his parents." Still further the burden of incriminating itself is thrown on the benevolent society, and it is obliged, through one of its officers, to report, under oath to the Legislature, that these and other provisions have not been violated, and the willful violation is punished by a penalty of one hundred dollars. It is still further provided that such society or institution shall not "interfere with the religious belief" of any child under its care, under the same penalty.

Let our readers consider how this will work. The Juvenile Asylum, for instance, receives from the Court a little vagrant whom his drunken father was employing to steal. It shelters, and feeds, and instructs him. On the Sunday, the child is taught the simple principles of Christianity. The father, becoming sober, complains to a Police Justice that "the religious belief of his child is interfered with," in that he is not taught the worship of the Virgin, or some other dogma. The Judge at once takes the boy to rove the streets, and fries the Asylum. Or, again, the House of Refuge, having trained and reformed a little thief until he seems likely to be a useful member of society, sends him to a farmer in Illinois to begin life. The boy's parents had been Catholic, though he himself may be indifferent. The farmer is required to sign a bond that he will "never interfere with the religious belief that the child may have received from his parents." That is, he can never take him to Sunday-school or church, never read the Protestant Bible with him, or invite him to any Protestant services, or otherwise influence him in his belief.

No Western farmer, of course, would sign such an obligation. The result would be that the House of Refuge would be forced to bring the lad back to New-York to be exposed to temptation and shift for himself. The same results would attend all that most beneficent system of emigration which is now going on under the Children's Aid Society, and other kindred institutions. The little waifs, who are now becoming honest and useful men in the West, would be left in the streets of this City. The farmers would not consent to receive them under such onerous conditions. The one Roman Catholic institution ("The Protectory") for such children in this City could not accommodate a hundredth part of them. They would drift about the streets, and grow up as thieves and vagabonds. But there would be one advantage of all this, in the view of the framers of this act. The children of the street would still be under the influence of their priests. Even in Blackwell's Island and Sing Sing, they would still have their religious belief without "interference."

What next shall we have from the priestly party in the Legislature? Will they pass an act that no Protestant family shall "interfere with the religious belief" of their servants? We cannot believe that the manhood of the Protestants in our rural districts is so enfeebled by party influence as to allow an act so oppressive and inquisitorial to Protestant institutions to pass. Suppose such a law had been proposed bearing as severely on Catholic institutions! What a storm would have raged! Is there no limit to the endurance of our own people under this priestly tyranny? We warn the Democrats of the Senate and House of the fact that a change in two or three districts in the next election will throw the Legislature into the hands of the Republicans. Let the intelligent Press in the country fully ventilate this transaction, and show the country constituents how their delegates are voting on "Hereditary Religion."

Personal Criticisms.

When Mr. JOHN JACOB ASTOR and his friends came out on the eve of an election, and signed a document certifying that the accounts of the City were all properly kept, almost everybody felt that they had committed an act of great unfairness toward the public. The facts were simple. All properly audited accounts have been withheld from the tax-payers for two or three years. It was asserted by several Democrats, leaders of the "Young Democracy," that a deficiency of not less than five millions existed in the Controller's Department. We demanded the production of the official reports, which the Controller is bound by law to issue every year. At this stage of affairs, Mr. ASTOR, Mr. TAYLOR and Mr. O. ROBERTS, (the latter of whom is part proprietor, and apparently occasional editor of the Sun,) made a superficial examination of a few City accounts, and roundly certified that they were all faithfully and properly kept. Experienced accountants assured us that such an investigation, to be of any value, would have occupied an expert fully three months, even if assisted by a staff of clerks. Yet Mr. ASTOR and his friends spent no more than six hours in the City offices. Can it be said that we exceeded our duty toward the public in exposing the want of principle—we may almost say the want of honor—which was displayed in such a transaction? The public, we have reason to believe, not only indorse our views, but thank us for giving them expression. Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, on the contrary, is of opinion that we are very wrong for daring to say a word which might be unpleasant to the feelings of "our best men," as he calls Messrs. ASTOR, TAYLOR, and O. ROBERTS. This idea Mr. FIELD appears to have borrowed from the World, which alone among the newspapers of the country ventured to put it forth. We hold still that Mr. ASTOR and his friends were guilty of a breach of faith toward the public, and that it was our bounden duty to say so, and to say it in a way which could not be misunderstood. If we had refrained from doing this, the system of calling in Messrs. ASTOR & Co. to "whitewash" public officers would probably have become an essential part of TWEED and SWEENEY's mode of government. As it is, when Mr. ASTOR and his friends attempt anything of the kind again, they know what they have to expect. We shall not be deterred from speaking the plain truth by Mr. FIELD's accusing us of being "personal." Without "personalities" of this kind, a newspaper would be nothing better than an almanac. Personalities of the sort which Mr. MARSHALL O. ROBERTS allows to appear in his paper, the Sun, and which he sometimes inspires, comes under a very different category, and should subject the person guilty of them to heavy fine or imprisonment. Let us by all means have the law of libel modified in any way which should compel men like Mr. ROBERTS' editors to act like decent journalists, and not like ruffians. The Press would be vastly the better for a change of that kind. But honest criticism on men who place themselves in a position to challenge it is one thing for which the public looks to us, and we shall continue to supply it, notwithstanding Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD's displeasure.

Solvency in Life Insurance.

The disturbance which recent failures in the insurance world have created will not be an unmingled evil if it concentrates attention upon the true test of solvency in life insurance and the essential conditions of good management. The immediate effect is prejudicial to the business. The saying of Dr MORGAN, that absolute security is nowhere found in a greater degree than in a carefully governed life insurance company, has been so twisted and perverted that most persons were accustomed to regard failure in life insurance as an utter impossibility. The delusion has served as a cover for many impudent cheats, and has impaired the effect of criticism upon the reckleness and extravagance in the conduct of business which an almost criminal competition has produced. This delusion the recent failure of the Great Western Life and the Farmers' and Mechanics' Life has rudely broken. The result is something not unlike panic. An entire system is suspected because abuses which have fastened themselves upon it have produced natural and disastrous results.

Before confidence can be restored, the responsibility for the irregular—not to say fraudulent—practices revealed in the failure of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Company, must be determined, either by legal proceedings against the parties implicated, or by legislation that shall fix the penalties of criminality for any future practices of the same kind. If, as reported, the aggregate apparent business of the Company in question were increased, and the ratio of its expenses reduced, by a pretended issue of policies which never were issued, there must be, somewhere, a responsibility of which the law can take cognizance. In such a case it is not enough that the affairs of the Company are placed in the hands of a receiver. If the Superintendent have the requisite authority, his duty is to bring to punishment the officials chargeable with the malpractices; and if he have not authority, his duty is to urge upon the Legislature amendments that will furnish better safeguards than the public at present possess.

The efficacy of legislation in regard to life insurance is, however, necessarily limited. The misfortune is, not that we have too little legislation upon the subject, but that we have too much. People rely upon the protection afforded by law, although the only adequate protection must be derived from an intelligent discrimination between good and bad management, and from adherence on the part of companies to tests which only public opinion can enforce. The law fulfills its proper purpose when it exacts from the companies sworn and specific statements as to their affairs, and provides for the publication of information so acquired, and when, further, it provides for the severe punishment of irregularities and frauds of the nature resorted to in the Farmers' and Mechanics' Company. It does more harm than good when it leads the public to put faith in stockholders' capital as of any appreciable value except during the earliest stage of a company's business; and it goes beyond its province when it lays down rules and imposes conditions which every company should be free to determine for itself.

The essential information, and that which should be supplied, officially, to the public in a more readable form than is at present adopted, embraces three distinct points: First, the amount of business, and the ratio of the reserve, or accumulation of premiums, to the sum required to constitute solvency. Second, the character of the securities in which the reserve is invested. Third, the cost of management, discriminating between salaries and other fixed outlay, and commissions paid to agents, with an additional distinction between the rate allowed on new business and the rate on renewal premiums. This information, or a large proportion of it, may be derived from the present reports. But it is mixed with a mass of returns possessing little or no value save to the companies or their agents, and in the matter of expenditures the statements are so "lumped" as to render them practically unavailable.

The first and simplest test the Superintendent already, in a bulky way, enables the public to apply for themselves. Let it be distinctly understood that no company is solvent whose "reserve," or accumulation of premiums, does not equal the present value of the insurances—in other words, does not amount to the sum that would be required for the reinsurance of all outstanding risks;—and a large number of companies will be at once discarded as unworthy of confidence. In the application of this test, stockholders' capital is really not entitled to popular consideration. It has uses in the case of a company, whose business is very small, but it is infinitesimal in proportion to the reserve required by a large company, whose solvency can be secured only by a wise administration of the money supplied by the policy-holders. As a rule, then, we suggest that policy-holders who desire to judge intelligently of the companies they are interested in, and parties who desire guidance in the taking out of policies, should trust only companies whose premium assets are equal to their liabilities, mathematically determined. We do not say that a company whose actual reserve is but seventy-five or eighty per cent. of the needed reserve, may not, under more careful management, acquire the requisite strength. But a really solvent company is alone that which can endure the test we have described.

Expenses afford another test that is universally applicable. The rates of commission generally allowed are exorbitant, and there is a general tendency to extravagance which takes shelter under such headings as "all other expenses." It is not easy to define a maximum percentage as the cost of carrying on business; but that is a safe rule which estimates the rate of expenditure for management by comparison with the rates incurred by other companies. Other things being equal, a company whose expenses are fifteen per cent. of the premium income is better than a company whose expenses amount to twenty-five per cent., and a company that does not expend more than ten per cent. is better than either. The time will no doubt come when ten per cent. will be regarded as a large average cost of acquiring and conducting business; and the newer companies approach this rate now, the better is their management. The more economical a company, the more lavish is its expenditure.

A Tremendous Power in Prussian Minority.

Every day that the dream of the war drifts farther away from us we shall be better able to realize how gigantic a convulsion it has been, and how thoroughly it has unsettled all the pre-existing order of European politics. The single act of the drama that still remains may be less exciting than that which ended with Wœrth, or Sedan, or Paris, but certainly involves issues of still greater magnitude than those which immediately followed from the previous phases of the great international debate. The National Assembly which is to meet on the 15th February, will have, in the first place, to decide the great question of peace or war. Their answer to this, there need be no great difficulty in prophesying. There will, doubtless, be blatant socialists from Lyons and Marseilles, as well as a few from Paris itself, who will express the views of a noisy, but far from powerful section of the population, by speaking and voting against what they will denominate as a "shameful peace." But the peasantry that has suffered from Uhlan raids and multiplied requisitions, that already stands face to face with opening Spring, without horses or oxen to draw the plow, and without seed-corn to put into the furrow once it is made; the peasantry that clung to the Empire because it represented social order, and seemed their only bulwark against chaos, they forming two-thirds of the entire population, will assuredly elect delegates pledged to vote for peace, no matter what the conditions.

But a greater question even than that awaits the Constituent Assembly. What is to be done with France? Is the Republic de facto to become a Republic de jure, and if so, how far is the Constitution of 1848 to be modified by the Imperial legislation that has intervened? Whatever be the ultimate form of government into which France may settle, it would be utterly contrary to all precedent and analogy if a popularly-elected body like the Constituent Assembly did not ratify the existing Republic. The Legislative Assembly which follows it may small the members of the Provisional Government on account of their presumed errors, or their demonstrated failure in the task they undertook, and so may pave the way for sweeping changes. But it is hardly probable that the eight or nine hundred popular Deputies who are to meet at Bordeaux will do much more than recognize the order of things that is presented to them, and do their best to give it cohesion and stability. The large towns of France are at present in no temper to parley with either Imperialists or Orleanists, and a civil war would certainly result from any attempt to force the claims of either. The peasant proprietors of France are among the most pronounced Conservatives in Europe, but even presuming that a majority of them are still prepared to vote for a regency and the continuation of the Imperial dynasty, they are not prepared to fight for these objects. To fight against them is precisely what the majority of the city populace would be certain to do, and if any reliance can be placed upon an endless series of protests signed by a very large portion of French officers in German prisons, a powerful section of the army is opposed alike to restoration or regency. The probabilities are therefore in favor of the continued existence of the Republic, under different leaders, it may be, and possibly with a dangerous tendency to the old French constitutional vice of excessive centralization, but still a Republic, pure and simple, of infinite significance to Europe, as well as to France.

MINOR TOPICS.

The affairs of the Custom-house naturally have a strong fascination for the honest and respected editor of the Sun, and in a recent number of his paper he complains that corruption exists to a great extent in that establishment. Well, suppose it does, would the President have made matters any better by appointing a professional black-mailer as Collector of the Port? Yet because the President would not be bullied into such an appointment, he has been systematically villified in the columns of the Sun, in a manner worthy only of the dastard who assailed the character of Mr. DORMAN B. EATON when that gentleman was not in a position to defend himself. Again, the Sun says that Custom-house inspectors "are in the habit of receiving bribes." So is the Sun, and therefore it is not in a very good position for rebuking others. An editor who goes about clad in a coat of black-mail is not quite the person to lecture Custom-house inspectors on the duty of keeping their hands out of other people's pockets.

The "Lord BOSTWICK" who appears in the DUDLEY FIELD correspondence is really Lord BOSTWICK—well known to many Americans as CUNNINGHAM BOSTWICK. He is a man thoroughly competent to write upon the subject to which his letter must have referred, but is there any excuse whatever for publishing the answer to his letter without the letter itself? This is what Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD has done, and we must say that it is of a piece with his conduct throughout the controversy. He makes assertions which he cannot prove, and evades every question which he finds "awkward to answer." What are we to think of any man who, while pretending to possess a conscience, deliberately suppresses a very important letter and prints only his reply to it? Is this fair, honest—is it acting in an upright and candid manner? We appeal to the public to decide. If Mr. FIELD is afraid to publish Lord BOSTWICK's letter, because he evidently is, why did he publish his own answer to it? Lord BOSTWICK may judge from the treatment he has received how far Mr. FIELD may be trusted, when he undertakes to act as judge on the motives or motives of others.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, would have Congress enact a Prohibitory Liquor law, applicable exclusively to the civil, military and naval officers and employes of the Government. A bill embodying his proposition makes the selling or giving of any intoxicating liquor to any person employed in the service of the United States, "a misdemeanor against the peace of the Union," punishable by fine and imprisonment. Another provision provides with unusually educational all officers and employes "to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors." Why not embrace Congressmen and the members of the Cabinet? Why not include all Senators and Representatives? Why not visit with severe punishment every man in the City of Washington who is not in full and complete a total abstainer? The absurdity of the proposition would not be greater than it is, and the misdemeanor of the nation would be more complete.

Now that there is a reasonable prospect of Prussia coming to terms with France, we may expect Count BISMARCK to be ready, by the time the London Conference finally closes, with a more decided policy on the Eastern question than he has hitherto given any indication of holding. The German Empire, with its finely-fitted off of a great military enterprise, and hardly as yet realizing its own precision in the political system of Europe, might not reputably have been ready to give Russia her own way in the East, in return for the friendly neutrality of that Power. But the German Empire will hardly be inclined to contemplate its magnificent issues, and with all its hosts retreated to aim the patriotic ardor of its united people, willingly be likely, as a well-informed critic puts it, to sanction any treaty that would prepare the way to "allow Russia to put an iron girdle round the waist of Germany, and so to Constantinople." If NAPOLEON III. had struck for Luxembourg before Sedan, he might have got it, and if Russia had sent her fleet to the Dardanelles on the back of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF's first circular, she would at least have had Prussian neutral. Now, BISMARCK will probably mend the one Empire as he did the other, by a somewhat made of diplomatic patches, which may be briefly rendered by a popular mode of symbolic language, consisting in expanding the fingers at right angles to the nose.

The House spent some time yesterday in convincing itself of very hasty and impolitic action toward the close of last Session. What is known as the "Chargeering Clause," involving fractions, has been before every Postmaster-General, in succession, for some years back, and has been by all regarded as inadmissible. Amid the hurry of last July, a resolution was quietly smuggled through, requiring the present Postmaster-General to pay the amount. Conscious of its iniquity, he had no alternative but to prepare to pay. Meanwhile, the subject was ventilated, and the House yesterday repealed the resolution it had ignorantly adopted. There was much moralizing on the inappropriateness of the incident, but the lesson it teaches will be forgotten when the next scramble comes.

An unknown hand strewed flowers over the grave of Rosa, and CARTER denies to the last of at least one person having wept for ROSSEROSSA, but in the case of these distinguished accusations, as well as in the case of lesser ruffians, it has been the constant practice of humanity to bury them quietly out of sight, and to refrain from blazoning their crimes against society by giving them a splendid public funeral. We have changed all that, however. We have an extensive class of accomplices, both inside and outside of the law, who take every opportunity to parade their spiritual sentiments for public discussion. It is, perhaps, hardly much while considering what were the sentiments that actuated the motley crowd who on Sunday last, at Philadelphia, heaped upon the remains of a brutal and reckless felon such honors as are accorded to the good and the great. They behaved, after their kind, in recognizing the only eminence they could appreciate—that of villainy. The extent of the demonstration—melancholy burlesque as it was—may fairly remind us of the power of the class from whom it emanated, as well as of that closely-allied class of uncovicted plunderers that makes the occupation of the avowed criminals to be regarded with comparative indulgence, and secure for them immunities without which their ranks would be greatly thinned.

The melancholy accident at Turkville, by which an entire family was suffocated by an escape of gas, is, for several reasons, very sadly suggestive. In the first place, it is not a little unfortunate for the cause of public benevolence, which, at this season, needs all the encouragement we can possibly bestow upon it, to find the donations of a charitable society so lamentably misapplied, as in this case where the supply of flour had been exchanged for a supply of rum. It would be too much to expect that those intrusted with the dispensing of public bounty should be held responsible for the character of its recipients, but it is, perhaps, to be desired that they should keep their installments within limits modest enough to be incapable of exchanging for any very large quantity of intoxicating drink. The neglect involved in turning on the gas at the main, without those poor people being warned to stop up the pipe which had been cut in their miserable lodging, appears from the details before us to have been almost culpable.

The spirited local comedy of "the wooing of the Fenians" is not yet played out. There are indications, however, that it is approaching the natural denouement, when the curtain will fall upon the very sirlies, dropping upon the sympathetic bosom of Tammany. O'GORMAN has sent ROSSA and his companions a check for $15,000 "on account." The Fenian exiles would be more than mortal if they failed to respond to the eloquent appeal to that feeling of gratitude which has been defined as "a lively sense of favors to come." Accordingly we find that yesterday afternoon their representatives were elected with the Common Council Committee of Arrangements, and we shall probably be next informed that the Custom-house has gracefully retired from the unequal contest. Let us give ROSSA and the rest of them all the credit they deserve for having endeavored to keep their own.

[illegible] unspotted from Tammany. Even now, we [illegible] a little pity, but only to such as get description in the lines, "a little time they strove—but then relented, and rowing they would ne'er consent—consented."

Whatever the fair advocates of female suffrage, under the clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment, may think of the conclusions come to by the Judiciary Committee, they have no reason to complain of the spirit in which their representations have been met. The Report which we publish this morning sheds them fairly upon the ground of disputants; argument of a great constitutional question, and disposes of their various pleas in a way that whether convincing or not to those most immediately interested, is both in tone and temper all they could possibly desire.

The Sun in the following paragraph, which we copy from its issue of yesterday, frankly admits that it will have nothing to do with any overthrow of Tammany, and gives one reason for its silence. If another reason is wanted, those who have read a recent pamphlet called the Nine Mil will have no difficulty in supplying it:—

"Testimony will doubtless be overthrown some day; but that day will not be expedited by the ally alence of all the fools in the world."

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

Miss LUCY RUSHTON, a lady who some years ago came before the public as the manager-[illegible] and principal actress of a theatre which has had too many transformations to be ever permanently prosperous, reappeared, after a lengthened absence, as the star artist at Wood's Museum last evening. Miss RUSHTON has brought to Wood's with the impressive form admired in the past, a great deal of earnestness and force, as a performer. These influential gifts and acquirements are displayed to much advantage in "Red Hands," a drama written, we believe for Miss RUSHTON, and of a kind that wins much popular success. Mr. GILBERT A'BECKET has done better literary work than has resulted in the production of "Red Hands," but he has never been more fortunate in the construction of a piece intended to startle the spectator by means of tragic events, and to keep him in the seat by the desire generally felt to ascertain in what manner a story turns out. We have no inclination by revealing this story to spoil the pleasure of the reader, who would at a future date draw from the last-named source of gratification a fair share of an evening of enjoyment. Briefly, we may say, that in "Red Hands" the most lasting interest is awakened by the release of a mother, Rachel Harmon, by name, who has been robbed of her child by Walter Harmon, an adventurer, who, previous to assuming himself in justification of the title of the play, has become the second husband of Rachel. Miss LUCY RUSHTON, who represents Rachel, portrays the woman with a tenderness toward her child, and a vigor of hatred and of motive toward her persecutors, supplying proof of study, and securing numerous assurances of satisfaction. Mr. C. W. BARRY, who embodies Walter Harmon, paints that person in recognizable but still forceful colors. A comic character, that of Crochet, a detective, is cleverly taken by Mr. L. J. MESTAYER. Miss AGNES WIRMIN sustains gracefully a role of which polish and prettiness are the essential attributes. The other characters are assigned to fit players, and it can be said without flattery that the whole performance, which was heartily applauded, is even and striking. A picture of "Raging Falls," in Australia, was the only notable scenic feature of the entertainment, and was decidedly realistic. The change of costume made necessary by the lapse of fourteen years between the prologue and the first act, was less suggestive of truth, for it is hard to believe that scarlet stockings, in daily wear, can outlast that period, and dazzle the eye at so ripe an age.

AFFAIRS AT HELLO'S.

New blood has been infused into the "Black Creek." In plainer words, that spectacle, although unflagging in its power of attractiveness, has been endowed with fresh charms. Hello's was packed by an audience assembled to gaze upon the novel features of the piece, last evening, and the house was not emptied of its contents until half an hour after the usual time. Two new dances, "The Demons' Revel" and "The Candelabra Ballet" commended themselves to the admirers of Mazurka and picturesque groupings, which fills an important part in "The Black Creek" for sheer beauty as divertissements and pictures. Mlle. BONFANTI, an artist whom it were impossible to overpraise for surety and finish of execution, and Signor NOVERRAZ, are the leading performers in both numbers of the dance, the new music for "The Demons' Revel" being the work of Signor OFFENBACH, whose delicate taste and varied experience are once more testified to by a series of graceful and cleverly-written movements. An act consisting of classical postures and vaulting by the Brothers BIZZARELLI was the earliest of the fresh acrobatic displays, and an exceedingly pretty and difficult parlor entertainment, by M. SEGUIN and two tiny gymnasts, was next in order, and really first in interest. A dance on stilts by the Sisters HERMANOS and the BIZZARELLIS was also introduced. All these elements of an increased success for the piece elicited enthusiastic demonstrations of delight, and the efforts of the Management caused no much astonishment and amusement as ever. A show of unfaded stuffs and untarnished gold cloth and fringe was made last evening, simultaneously with the performance of the additional scenes mentioned above. A prolonged career for the "Black Creek" is undoubtedly prophesied by these incidents.

"THE POOR GENTLEMAN" AT WALLACK'S THEATRE.

One of the choicest exhibitions of old comedy ever seen was that of COLMAN'S "Poor Gentleman" on Saturday night at Wallack's Theatre. Mr. GILBERT'S Sir Robert Bramble is among the most charming efforts of this mellow and accomplished comedian. The Ollapod of Mr. STODDART may be open to some slight objections, but is, notwithstanding, delightfully quaint and unalloyedly amusing. Mr. FISHER fills the outlines of the "Poor Gentleman" himself with dignity and feeling, and Frederick Bramble has better within Mr. GEO. CLARKE'S dramatic powers than some other of the exacting characters in old comedy lately attempted by him. In like manner we may observe that Lady Worthington is nicely suited to Mrs. BARRY, and that Humphrey Dobbins, Cornoral Foss and Miss Lucretia McTabb are well adapted to the respective capacities of Messrs. WILLIAMSON and LANAGAN and of Mrs. SUTTON. The performance was altogether a fine alternation of sustained pathos and rattling gayety, and was abundantly relished by an intelligent and numerous audience. Last evening "Ours" was played, with Mr. LESTER WALLACK in the chief character; and after a succession of repeats during the week, on Saturday next another play of COLMAN'S is to be acted in "The Clandestine Marriage."

THE MARBLE HEART AT BOOTH'S THEATER.

"The Marble Heart," like "Victorine" and one or two other French dramas, is constructed on the plan of prefiguring the ultimate action and catastrophe by means of a frame which is represented as a sort of prologue. In the case of "The Marble Heart" this affords scope for wide variety of scenery and costume, and also for the introduction of some familiar classical personages, whose characters are selected as typical of those of the actual people of the drama to come. The play was on the whole quite satisfactorily produced at Booth's on Saturday night. Mr. BARRETT acts Phidias and Raphael with strength and feeling. The intense and usually melancholy phases of sentiment through which the hero is made, almost exclusively, to pass, are well fitted to Mr. BARRETT'S manner. It is chiefly essential [illegible] emotions with unperverted passion. This Mr. BARRETT can do and does do. In the comedy scenes, such as they are, an air slightly disengaged and uncomfortable is not inappropriate to the situations, so that on what is Mr. BARRETT'S weakness side, the part is least exacting. The performance was altogether a very respectable success, and may be justly very repeated, as occasion serves, during the season.

MR. EDWIN FORREST.

Arrangements have been effected by which Mr. EDWIN FORREST, after three years' absence, will return to the Metropolitan stage at the Fourteenth-street Theatre. This event is regarded with lively interest by Mr. FORREST'S admirers, and also by numbers among the younger class of play-goers who have not seen the veteran tragedian in the zenith of his favorite characters. Opinion differs, as is very natural, concerning the merit of Mr. FORREST'S performances. There is little question, however, in the mind of most judges, that in some of these performances he has never been surpassed, or, from appearances, that in our time he is likely to be. His engagement in New-York at the present epoch in his career is a dramatic incident of importance, and one that will excite considerable discussion. Mr. FORREST will open, we learn, on the 6th of February, and will probably select either King Lear or Richelieu for his first impersonation.

FENIAN TESTIMONIAL.

We are asked to state that there will be a "Grand Testimonial Benefit Entertainment" at the Academy of Music, on Monday evening, Feb. 6, in honor of the distinguished Irish exiles who have lately come among us. There can be no doubt that if such an affair is taken in hand by a tithe of the number who are warmly interested in these sentiments, the contemplated performance must be crowned with brilliant success.

PROF. RIMLEY'S BENEFIT.

The intended benefit performance for Prof. RIMLEY, which was to have taken place on Saturday evening last, was deferred because of the storm. A date for its occurrence in the future will soon be announced.

ALBANY.

Another Street-Railroad Project—Proposed Steam Line from the Battery to Harlem River—Bill for the Protection of Coal Consumers—Harmony in the Ring.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Among the bills introduced in the Assembly this evening was one by Speaker HITCHMAN for a grand elevated steam railway project in New-York City. This last steam scheme proposes to run a railroad from the Battery to Harlem River, somewhere west of Sixth-avenue—precise route not designated—with a branch from Twenty-sixth-street to a point east of Madison-avenue, and thence up the east side to Harlem River. Branches are also authorized to be built to connect with any railroad depot in New-York. Among the incorporators are SAMUEL SLOAN, HORACE A. NELSON, JOSIAH SUTHERLAND, and others. The capital stock is to be $10,000,000.

PROTECTION OF COAL CONSUMERS.

A bill was introduced to protect coal consumers, by authorizing coal to be weighed by the Department of Public Works.

HARMONY IN THE RING.

In the Senate, Mr. CREAMER made a speech on a question of privilege, relative to an article in an Albany paper, intimating that he and BOSS TWEED were not in full accord. He assured his brother Senators that he and the Boss were on the very best of terms, and that although they sometimes differed, as great men will do on public questions, yet there was no ground for the rumor that there was anything but the most cordial relations between them. Mr. TWEED followed up this interesting announcement with the remark that he did not fight his quarrels through the newspapers, but if he had any he was fully able to attend to them personally. With the exception of this episode, the proceedings of the Senate were devoid of interest.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.—ALBANY, Monday, Jan. 30.

The following bills were introduced:

By Mr. SANFORD—Amending the charter of the Southern Boulevard Bridge Company; to authorize the directors and fixing the regulations for the management of its affairs.

By Mr. TWEED—Authorizing the American Congregational Union, of the City of New York, to take and to hold by gift, &c., real and personal estate, for aid to poor churches.

By Mr. CHAPMAN—Authorizing the Common Council of Hamilton to borrow money on the credit of the city, not to exceed $20,000, to pay indebtedness, interest not to exceed seven per cent, and making provision for the payment of the same; but a vote of the electors shall be first taken at a special election.

By Mr. LEWIS—Authorizing the Buffalo City Insurance Company to insure vessels, freights, goods, &c., and fixing the terms of office of officers.

By Mr. CHAPMAN—Amending the Binghamton Water law.

BILLS REPORTED.

The following bills were reported:

Authorizing the taking of additional lands and waters for the Croton aqueduct, New-York.

Authorizing the Common Council of the City of Lockport to raise money by tax to pay indebtedness.

BILLS PASSED.

The following bills were passed:

To revise and amend several acts relating to public instruction.

To incorporate the American Home Missionary Society.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The resolution to elect, on Feb. 6, Regents of the University in place of GIDEON HAWLEY and ROBERT CAMPBELL, deceased, was adopted.

The bill providing the manner of electing town officers in Richmond County was ordered to a third reading.

Adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The following bills were introduced:

By Mr. KELLY—Incorporating the Grand Lodge of Benevolent and Protective Order of New-York; also, to incorporate the Home for Aged in New-York.

By Mr. FIELDS—To correct a clerical error in the Railroad Bonding law.

By Mr. D. BURNS—Providing that all sales of real estate of the Sheriff made in the City and County of New-York, under a decree or judgment of any Court of record, shall be made by the Sheriff of said City and County except in cases where said Sheriff is interested.

By Mr. HAYES—Amending the Revised Statutes so that administrators appointed by a Surrogate, and on the death of the executors, may sell and give title to real estate.

By Mr. HOWELL—Incorporating the Fulton (Oswego County) Savings Bank.

By Mr. FLAGG—Authorizing the City of Troy to take water from the Hudson River for city purposes.

By Mr. DECKER—Authorizing the trustees of the Seaman's Fund to sell certain lands.

By Mr. BARNEY—To erect a new county from a part of Schoharie County.

By Mr. SHLEREE—Amending and consolidating acts relative to the village of Ithaca.

By Mr. GLEASON—Extending the provisions of a law of last session relative to banking, to private banking corporations.

By the SPEAKER—Incorporating a New-York railroad company, and authorizing the laying of a double track on the west side of the City up to Spuyten Duyvil Creek and back to Sixth-street.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The bill amending the charter of the Canal-street Baptist Church, Brooklyn, was ordered to a third reading.

The bill increasing the pay for the publication of the session laws to fifty cents a folio uniformly, was defeated in Committee, but in the House Mr. SIMKINS moved to order the bill to a third reading, which was carried.

The bill fixing compensation of Supervisors was ordered to a third reading.

Adjourned.

The Firemen's Ball.

The forty-second annual ball in aid of the widows and orphans of the late Volunteer Fire Department took place at the Academy of Music last evening. The ball proved to be a brilliant success, being attended by an exceedingly large number of ladies and gentlemen. Among those present were Hon. James W. Gerard, Hon. Charles G. Cornell, A. J. Garvey, Commissioner Henry Smith, Sheriff M. T. Brennan, County Clerk Loew, Superintendent Kelso, Louis Delmonico, Ex-Mayor Gunther, Charles Delmonico, James F. Wenman, Alonzo Slote, Cornelius C. Fullou, Capt. James Cameron, Robert McGinnis, Daniel D. Conover, William H. Wickham, George F. Nesbitt, Wilbur F. Kirby, Ex-County Clerk Connor and Wm. C. O'Brien. Among the ladies in attendance were Mrs. Jas. J. Kelso, Mrs. Owen W. Brennan, Mrs. Conover, Mrs. Loew, Miss Brennan, Mrs. A. J. Garvey and others. The rear part of the Academy was handsomely decorated with gas-jets, representing a hose-carriage and equipments. The arrangements at the ball were most efficiently discharged by the various Committees. Capt. THOMAS superintended the Police arrangements.

WASHINGTON.

The Claims of a Mail Contractor—Question of Admitting the Georgia Senators—Printing the Current Proceedings on the Pensions—Lofty Bridges—Conflicting Operations a Grievance of the Steam-Ship Lines.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The session in the House, today, was [illegible] claim. Soon after the morning hour Mr. DAWES got the floor, and by unanimous consent reported from the Committee on Appropriations a resolution repealing the resolution of July 15 last, by which the Postmaster-General was authorized and directed to settle the claim of Contractor [illegible] on the basis of his settlement in 1867. Mr. DAWES then went on to give a history of the transaction [illegible] at length. He showed that after Postmaster-General A. V. BROWN had adjusted the account of this contractor, he set up claims for damages, which were successively rejected by Postmasters-Generals BROWN, HOLT, BLAIR, HANDALL, and lastly by CRESWELL himself, all reaffirming the decision of BROWN, who had refused to allow this claim. Thus the matter rested until July 15, 1870, the last day of last session, when a resolution prepared expressly to fit the case, directing the Postmaster-General to settle it, and prescribing what should be used as evidence, was suddenly rushed through both Houses. Under this resolution, which was mandatory, the Postmaster-General went to work to adjust the claim on the basis prescribed, first taking the views of the President and Cabinet upon the question whether he had any other recourse than settlement, and it was decided that he must obey the resolution of Congress. Thus on the 23d of December last, a decision was rendered in favor of the claimants of $142,000, the amount claimed having been $720,000. Mr. DAWES then went on to give a detailed history of the processes by which the Postmaster-General made this adjustment, showing how he found himself deftly met at every weak point in the claim by the cunningly-prepared resolution of Congress, and in conclusion he said he hoped the House would take the lesson to heart of these consequences of the precipitate action of Congress. Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, who obtained a below for moments on the subject, used it to make partisan capital against the Postmaster-General, by charging him with being guilty of gross negligence, in not calling the attention of Congress to its ownacts, and insinuating that he was improperly influenced in making the award by the fact that one of CROSPERRING'S counsel was Mr. HARLE, formerly First Assistant Postmaster-General, and once Mr. CRESWELL'S law partner. Mr. DAWES reported that the House was not in a position to censure the Postmaster-General, as Congress, by its action, had brought it all upon him. There was a deep interest and considerable excitement manifested during Mr. DAWES' speech, at the conclusion of which the resolution repealing the resolution of July last was unanimously passed, furnishing a striking commentary upon the manner in which Congress does many things.

RANK OF NAVAL OFFICERS.

The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs will probably consider the bill from the House regulating the rank of the staff officers at its next meeting. There is no disposition in the Committee to delay the settlement of the question beyond the present Congress. It is likely the House bill will be reported to the Senate with some amendments.

THE GEORGIA SENATORS.

After a half hour's skirmish in the Senate today, Mr. TRUMBULL succeeded in having the question of the admission of the Georgia Senators taken up. He stated the conclusion of the majority of the Judiciary Committee, and the facts and arguments on which it was based. As heretofore stated, the majority report recommends the admission of Mr. HILL only. Mr. STEWART followed, sustaining the report of himself and Mr. RICE in favor of FARROW and WHITLEY, and a vote was taken on his resolution admitting them, which was lost by a vote of 19 to 34. The vote was then about to be put on the resolution admitting Mr. HALL, when Mr. STEWART moved to substitute the name of Mr. FARROW. Although this question had been substantially decided by the previous vote, a new discussion sprung up, and Mr. STEWART talked himself, and interrupted others who spoke, till 5 o'clock, when the Senate adjourned out of sheer exhaustion. It is supposed he will weary of himself to-morrow, and permit the final vote to be taken.

PRINTING THE CURRENCY.

The representatives of the bank note companies are here in force to oppose the proposition now under consideration by the House Banking and Currency Committee, to provide for printing all the currency, treasury and national bank, at the Treasury Printing Bureau. Figures have been presented to the Committee, going to show that it would result in a saving of $860,000 per annum to have all the work done here, exclusive of the sum of $54,000 per year now paid for transportation alone. The Committee are favorably disposed toward this measure, though no definite action has yet been taken. It is considered in connection with the matter of renewing the plates for the national bank currency.

THE AIR-LINE RAILROAD.

The opposition to the New-York and Washington Air-Line Railroad managed to exhaust the morning hour again today, by their tactics of delay, and the bill consequently went over until next Monday. Some of the opposition is based on hostility to the principle involved in the bill, by which Congress assumes to grant a railroad franchise through the States, but more of it is inspired by the representatives of existing lines.

THE INCOME TAX REPEAL.

The Ways and Means Committee had no meeting this morning owing to the absence of a quorum, hence no vote on the income tax resolution was reached. Mr. MCCARTHY, on whose vote depends a favorable report for repeal, is still absent.

WELCOME TO THE FENIAN EXILES.

Gen. BUTLER offered and the House passed today a joint resolution welcoming the released Fenians to our shores, and inviting them to visit Washington. The resolution directs the President to transmit a copy of the same to the Fenian gentlemen. No one in the House had the courage to oppose this piece of demagoguery, and the Republican majority allowed it to pass. It will probably slumber in the Senate. Its passage by the House was announced in that body while Mr. RICE was speaking on the Georgia question, but Mr. FENTON appealed to him to yield the floor a few minutes to allow a motion that the Senate concur. He was sure, he said, only a few minutes would be occupied, but Mr. TRUMBULL objected summarily, and a night's sleep will give opportunity for reason to resume its sway.

THE CINCINNATI BRIDGE.

The House Committee on Commerce is expected to decide to-morrow on its report in the case of the railroad bridge across the Ohio River at Cincinnati. The Pennsylvania Railroad proposes to throw its bridge across at a height of seventy feet above low-water mark. The suspension bridge at the same place is 100 feet above low-water mark. The people all along the river, from Pittsburg to New-Orleans, and the National and the Southern Commercial Conventions have petitioned Congress to pass a resolution against building bridges across navigable rivers in a manner to obstruct navigation unnecessarily. Delegates are now here asking Congress to pass an act requiring the Railroad Company to elevate the bridge thirty feet above the intended height, so as to admit the passage of boats under it at all ordinary stages of water. A Board of Engineers sent by the Secretary of War under act of Congress to make a survey, report that the bridge it constructed as the intended elevation will seriously hinder the navigation of the river, and also that to increase the elevation as the people desire, will cost only $288,000 additional. On the other hand, if the bridge is not thus raised, in the vicinity of $1,200,000 will be added to the cost of the yearly transportation of coal down the river. Congress is also asked to pass a general law regulating the height of bridges across navigable rivers. The Committee are understood to favor the legislation sought.

THE TEXAS SENATORSHIP.

The New-Orleans Republican has a special telegram from San Antonio reporting that Gen. JOSEPH J. REYNOLDS, commander of the Fifth Military District, has been elected United States Senator from Texas, to succeed MORGAN C. HAMILTON on the 4th of March.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, [illegible]

The following nominations were made to the Senate today:

[illegible] R. Brigham, Appraiser of Merchandise, Milwaukee, Wis.; Andrew L. [illegible] Appraiser of Merchandise, Evansville, Ind.; [illegible] Appraiser of Merchandise, Cincinnati, Ohio; [illegible]

[illegible] construction, consisting of Messrs. FORNEY, UPSON and MORGAN, at their meeting, today, unanimously agreed to report to the Committee in favor of the Senate bill repealing the test oath.

DECORATION DAY.

The Senate Military Committee agreed to report adversely on the bill making the 31st of May, or "Decoration Day," a national holiday.

A GRIEVANCE OF STEAM-SHIP LINES.

Letters have been received today by the Secretary of the Treasury from the agents of the Liverpool and Great Western Steam-ship line, the Anchor line, and the British North American Mail Steap-ship Company, stating that they have been notified by the Collector of the Port of New-York that every steamer clearing without a full and entire manifest of the cargo on Board will be held liable to a fine of $500; and they submit to the Secretary the entire impracticability of such a clearance without a delay of at least twelve hours in the departure of steamers after their loading is completed. They suggest also, whether some amendment of the law or Treasury regulations cannot be obtained, so that the steamer or ship agents should be obliged to make a correct return of the cargo laden on board of any steamer or ship cleared by them within forty-eight hours after their departure, or be personally held subject to such fines as the Secretary may determine upon, and which should be enforced. Secretary BOUTWELL has the matter under advisement. Directions have been issued from the Treasury Department to the effect that fees for certifying manifests will be hereafter taken only on the original manifests of goods passing from the United States into Canada and back again, the original manifests to be filed at the point of departure. The two copies of the one sent to the point of destination, and the other carried by the conductor of the train, though certified to, shall not be chargeable with fees.

CONSOLIDATION OF REVENUE DISTRICTS.

In consequence of several revenue collectors who have been designated as the collectors of the consolidated districts in New-York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Cincinnati, not having had time to file their bonds as such, and their appointments not having been acted upon by the Senate, the President will to-morrow issue an executive order delaying the proposed consolidation until the 28th of February.

SMUGGLING OPERATIONS.

Special Agent MCLEAN, of San Francisco, reports the seizure at that port, on board the Pacific Mail steamer Japan, from Hong Kong China, of 200 pounds of opium. It was found concealed in a fresh water tank in the engineer's department. He also reports the seizure of ten pounds of smoking opium on board the Sing Company's steamer plying between Panama and San Francisco. The officers of the Treasury are also in possession of the fact of smuggling by women who visit parties on board these vessels before their cargoes are discharged, and secrete articles about their clothing to bring ashore. Capt. ELDRIDGE, agent for the line of steamers, dismissed the three assistant-engineers of the steamer Japan, and the assistant-engineer of the Panama steamer, who were suspected of being engaged in thus violating the law. The Customs officers at New-Orleans request that the hulk of a vessel be anchored at a suitable point at South-west Pass, near the entrance of the Mississippi River to be used as a boarding station for the officers of the district and port of New-Orleans, great facilities being offered to smugglers by the distance between the present boarding and the anchorage ground for vessels arriving from foreign ports.

DR. M'COSH'S LECTURES.

Natural Theology and Apologetics—Third of a Series of Lectures by Rev. Dr. James McCosh.

Rev. JAMES MCCOSH, D. D., LL.D., President of Princeton College, delivered the third of his series of lectures, on Natural Theology and Apologetics, at Association Hall, last evening, before a large and increasing audience. He said these were three indications in the geological ages of a progression from the inanimate up to the animate, and from the lower animals up to the higher, and the mind, ever looking for causes, asks how all this is produced? The answer, if answer was to be had, was to be given by science, and not by religion, which simply insists that we trace up all things, whether acting by mediate or immediate agency. Mr. DARWIN would trace it to the somewhat enunciated principle of natural selection, to the preservation of the creatures best suited to their circumstances, and the success of the strong in the struggle of life. That this principle is exhibited in nature, and working to the arrangement of the plants and animals from age to age, he had no doubt. It was apparent in the effect of Spring on trees and plants, but it did not prove there was not another principle at work. He was not satisfied that this principle had produced life out of dead matter, (Mr. DARWIN nowhere said it did,) that it produced sentient beings out of the essentient, that it created a conscious mind from an unconscious body and that it regenerated man from the brute. There was no positive evidence that it produced a new species out of the old ones, and with regard to this point it seemed to account for some phenomena while it left others unexplained. There were gaps between one species and one age without any intermediate space to fill it, as being the descendants of the one and the progenitors of another, which showed there were other principles at work in nature besides natural selection. The law of the weak being made to give way before the strong was very apt to be abused, and would certainly be perverted by those who did not take into account the higher laws which limit and are expected to subordinate it. If this doctrine were allowed to prevail, the weak would be trampled on, the attempts of philanthropic men in our own time to elevate the condition of a despised race by schools and colleges, justice and kindness—a doctrine worse than slaveholding—would be introduced. The self-sufficient North would become as tyrannical as the rebellious South, and all their personal purposes would tend to the degradation of a people which for weal or woe, God had placed in our midst. There might be a tendency in man to degenerate, but he believed in the power to restrain and regenerate, and to the attainment of this end Christ's resurrection was directed. At this time the two theories, the earth-born and the heaven-born, were striving for the mastery. According to the former, there were essential inferior races which were decreed to give way in the struggle for existence upon the precept that Providence provided a few favored races with powers which enabled them to advance in the principle of national selection. This tenet he believed was effecting a very injurious tendency in this country and in others. This spirit was setting itself determinedly against missionary efforts and driving many from the service of God. In the last age, the cry was, first civilize and then Christianize; now it was, to elevate one race at the expense of another, and it was a fit doctrine for those who make the ignorant subservient to their desires without any reproaches of conscience. Following the steps of great and good men, he rejoiced in the diversity of human races, with their peculiarities, and like them, desired to see all unite in the praise of God. He asserted there were insuperable difficulties, even in a natural history point of view, in the theory that man sprang from the lower animals. Man falls into a state of things suited to him, and evidently prepared for him, yet there was a progression in human nature. The physical gave way to the intellectual, and the moral claimed to subordinate to both. There was still the law of natural selection, but a new spirit sprang up and refuted all. He believed in the necessity of poverty, distress and war, and the latter ought to continue as long as there were evils which its agency would eradicate. The ordeal through which this continent recently passed, and that yet existing in Europe, gave evidence that the ferocities of war, instead of diminishing with the advance of civilization, rather increased it, and gave verification to the text of Scripture which stated that the contest between good and evil would continue until the triumph of the former would be secured. For the explanation of this subject we were indebted to science, but now the spirit of the works of Christ bursts upon the earth and adds an impulse to everything which nothing but Divinity itself could impart. In the [illegible] tions regarding the creation of [illegible] animals, he maintained that [illegible] unity in God's mode of [illegible] on earth in the aeons past. They could see as clearly the nature of the dispensation [illegible] we live—it was a dispensation of the spirit. There was as there ever had been in nature, a struggle between element and element, between man and nature, and also a contest between the spiritual and the natural. It was especially a contest between sin and holiness, and was observable in the struggle between the passions and the restraining influence of conscience. There were clear indications as to which side the victory was finished to, and the conscience and heart, would assert their supremacy to their claims to reign, and subdue all things to themselves. The work of the Spirit was yet partial, but the time was at hand when it would succeed. This concluded Dr. MCCOSH'S first series of lectures, and he briefly resumed the arguments he adduced in his previous lectures, extended notices of which have already appeared in the TIMES. These were the discovery of the primary and final causes, the argument he adduced in supporting the theory of design, his opposition to those adduced by Professor SPENCER, WALLACE and DARWIN, a plan in the organic unity and growth of the world, the progress of humanity, and the claims of the Bible as history of the world, and the controlling power, the love and mercy of a Superior Being, who directs all things to His own glory and the benefit of mankind.

THE BAR AND THE PRESS.

Editorial Comments of the Springfield Republican Upon the Correspondence Between Mr. David Dudley Field and Mr. Bowles.

From the Springfield Republican, Jan. 30.

The correspondence between the representative counsel of the notorieties who have stolen the Erie Railroad, and the editor of the Republican, will challenge attention for its length. But it has qualities that redeem it to the public interest, and even invite popular reading. The questions discussed are always of public importance, and, just now, exciting considerable attention. Then there are some hard hitting and tolerably lively writing on both sides. The correspondence is not wanting, too, in those personally tragic elements, that almost inevitably, as sadly, accompany such controversies, and that, we are sorry to say, the profane public generally enjoy most of all. A portion of the letters were privately circulated by one party, and a larger portion by the other, a week ago; but the whole are now for the first time, published.

There are three main questions raised in this correspondence. First, the responsibilities of lawyers for the character of their clients and causes; how far a lawyer may or must rightly go in assuming and defending a wrong or doubtful cause? Of course, there is no approach to the settlement of this question. It is forever old and forever new. But, practically, it has greatly changed its scope and character the last few years. Whereas it was formerly raised, almost exclusively, with regard to the defense of criminals on trial for their lives or their liberty, it now comes up, chiefly, with reference to the use of the law for the perpetration or defense of monstrous outrages upon the rights of property. These new and broader elements are forming a new and broader discussion of the question, and require, both in the interest and honor of the profession, and the safety of the public, something more nearly a settlement than it has ever had before.

Secondly, is the amenability of the lawyer to public criticism and censure, both for the character of the causes and clients with which he identifies himself, and for the manner with which he espouses them. This, indeed, is the main point involved in the discussion of the Messrs. FIELDS and Mr. BOWLES. The editor was arraigned, and only for the expression of opinions on the professional relations and conduct of the senior Mr. FIELD, in his journal, but his right as an editor to have any opinions at all on such a subject was disputed. On this point, we cant hardly doubt a general acquiescence in the journalist's view. The bodies of corporations and the closely public character of a lawyer's position and conduct in Court, representing causes which involve the public morality, as well as the property, rights and interests of the public, no less than of individuals, make it very plain; and the readers of the correspondence will generally share the editor's astonishment that it was disputed.

Thirdly, and the most pertinent and personal, was the nature and propriety of Mr. FIELD'S associations with FISK and GOULD. Here the editor has the advantage of appealing to a public that has already made up its mind on his side. But Mr. FIELD presents the opposite view with a good deal of vehemence and some plausibility. So long as he confines himself to attractions, what he says is calculated to make considerable impression. But when he comes not only to protestations of the integrity and independence of his relations with his clients, but to the indorsement of the assurances of his distinguished clients that their causes are just, and that they have never appropriated a dollar of the Erie Railroad property for their own private benefit, he weakens his cause by too bold assumptions. The audience, to which he appeals, is in no mood, just now, certainly, to listen to such pretensions. He has committed the folly of over-stating his case, and, therefore, runs the risk of having it underestimated.

The editor, very properly and wisely, kept to the general question in the discussion. The public, whom he represented, frames no bill of particulars against the advocates of wrong in their behalf. Even if he had been ready, off hand, with the names and dates, Courts and places, injunctions and motions and affidavits, with which the history of this notorious service swarms, and which go to make up the offense charged, he would have only given his correspondent the advantage of shifting the issue from a particular one, a broad moral question to an item of detail. But Mr. FIELD'S demand for a bill of particulars is not likely to go unanswered. The details exist, and there are plenty of gentlemen, we imagine, who, upon this invitation for them, will be ready to furnish them. Indeed, while the general question is alone that which the public can deal with properly, the specific one deserves to be brought before the Bar Association of New-York, which should ask itself whether, for this not and that in his recent professional relations, the conduct of the bar itself should not be thrown over and disgraced. The disgraceable notoriety he has achieved for himself and for New-York law requires that some notice should be taken of his conduct, even by those whom he alleges are equally at fault with himself. The Courts might not be independent or impartial, but an investigation and discussion by it would do good, even if no bold and righteous verdict could be anticipated from the majority.

The great mistake of Mr. FIELD, as that of his defenders, in this controversy, is that they wholly ignore the transcendent fact of the times. They say it is mere cant to talk as the community and its representatives, the public journals, are talking about him and his distinguished clients. Here is the law, they say, here are the Courts and here are the lawyers—scientific machinery which civilization has got up to Christianize conflicting rights of opposing citizens; and whatever this machinery accords to Mr. FIELD and Mr. FISK, they are entitled to, and nobody has a right to dispute the integrity of the verdict. Even if Mr. FISK seizes somebody else's property, and by Mr. FIELD'S help is able to hold on to it, it is not to be presumed that the judges or jurors would grant it to him unless it really belonged to him—and, when they have so granted it, the question is settled. The idea that Courts may be bribed, or that the very forms of law, fashioned to protect from force and preserve order, may be so twisted as to do the opposite, is ignored, or supposed to be impossible, or, if admitted as a possibility, is to be regarded as one of the incidents or aberrations of an exact science, to be submitted to, as we submit to the aberrations of planetary movements, or to too much deemed of too much rain in the great and beneficent processes of nature.

Now if the law is an exact science, like geology or mathematics,—if the elements that enter into it and administer it are divine,—if one of Judge BARNARD'S injunctions is a decree of Providence, and an affidavit from Mrs. LAWTER a "song of the spheres,"—if the Court of the infinite is run by the New-York code, and FIELD and SHERMAN are entitled to an arrest of judgment against the Ten Commandments—if, in short, the devil is as good as the average, and the sum of both divine and human wisdom is the French philosophy that no matter what happens so long as it does not happen to yourself—all this this being so, then these gentlemen are clearly right, FIELD, BARNARD and FISK are the victims of unworthy prejudices, and the modern newspaper is indeed "a public nuisance," as the junior FIELD protests. But if human imperfection is to be recognized in law and lawyers—if we admit the moral element into their work—if there is such a thing as a private conscience and a public conscience as well, then they are all wrong, and the journalist's general view in this discussion is the correct one. In this instance the lines may have drawn the lines too broadly or too sharply here or there; but given the occasion of the moral sense in human nature and human action, yield to public opinion the right to bring in the Ten Commandments and independent thought to bear upon law and courts and lawyers, and the case is up for Messrs. FIELD and FISK, and their apologists, whether in the profession or in political and railroad rings.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?—Americans, study. "Daunter" means defiant. The yacht "Daunter" collects the Alabama Claims in 1872. Tea-drinkers will not collect them before. The South and West want the money with interest, and the nation's honor demands a thirty-day draft in the hand of "a good Yankee collector," BENJ. F. BUTLER, if you please. But the debt must be paid—France contributed on the establishment of a Republic—means right. The Cuban flag is lettered as follows: "Spain, your orders for munitions and vessels of war solicited," which means oppression, and is a direct contradiction of congratulation to France, and antagonistic to our republican form of government and freedom. Charges of Treachery Brought Against the Canadian Government.

The United States Petitioned to Interfere in Behalf of the People—Full Text of the Memorial Presented to the President on Saturday.

To His Excellency U. S. Grant, President of the United States:

The memorial of the people of Rupert's Land and Northwest British North America. They would most respectfully and earnestly represent unto your Excellency:

That in the year 1869 the Government of the Dominion of Canada, made proposals to "the Governor and Company of Adventurers trading into Hudson's Bay," commonly called the "Hudson's Bay Company," to purchase their rights, claimed to have been given to them, and to be held by them, under and by virtue of a charter granted by Charles II., King of England, in the year 1670. That negotiations had continued between the Dominion Government and said Company, into the month of March of the same year, (1869) when the Company agreed to transfer to the Dominion the lands, Government and people of the country, for and in consideration of the sum of £300,000, reserving to themselves certain tracts of choice land and improvements thereon. That this sale and purchase of said country, Government and people, were approved by the English Government, and were to have been ratified by royal proclamation. That said negotiations were conducted and concluded between the said Company and the Dominion of Canada without either of them deeming it proper to consult or even notify the people (your memorialists) of the proposed transfer of their country to a foreign power and jurisdiction. That pending the negotiations between the said parties, the Dominion Government sent its agents into our country, who commenced a road through our estates without consulting the people of the country. That the same Government, in the month of August, 1869, before the transfer had been completed, sent a corps of surveyors, who, according to instructions, as follows: "You will confer with Gov. McTAVISH, of the Hudson Bay Company, (only) who is able and will no doubt be glad, to give you advice and assistance in the performance of this important duty," to survey our farms and homes, without any regard to former surveys, anciently established landmarks, rights or claims whatever, but went forth marking off certain choice tracts of the land for themselves and other Government officials and friends yet in Canada. That we, your memorialists, knew of this survey, without notice to the people of our country, without their consent, or any consultation with them whatever. That the Dominion Parliament preceding the transfer, proceeded to organize a Government for our country, giving to the Governor who was to administer the same unlimited power, and to a Governor himself termed it, "almost despotic," such as the two, or more at the risk personally, assisted by a Council to be chosen by himself, consisting of Hudson Bay Company officers and Canadians; and thus your memorialists (the people) found their services, lands, rights, homes, possessions and monuments of title set at naught and disregarded, and a Government established over their heads, in the selection of the rulers and administration of which they had no voice; and by the process they found that their homes, their country and their liberties were held at the mercy of a foreign Power and subject to a foreign jurisdiction.

THE REBELLION.

Your memorialists became the agents of a foreign Power swarming into our country, taking possession of it without any authority from the people, cutting up our farms to suit their own views and purposes, seeing our people daily insulted, and hearing threats by these foreign officials of extermination, in order to make room for their "more intelligent man," Canadian. That learning through the public Press, our only medium, that we had been sold by a company of adventurers residing in London, England, with our lands, rights and liberties as so much merchandise to a foreign Government; that we learned from the same source, the same medium, the Press, that the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada had organized a Government for our country, as if it had jurisdiction over us, and that we were to have no voice in that Government, and that a Governor appointed to rule over us, clothed with "almost despotic power," had started from Canada on route to our country, accompanied by a band of unscrupulous and irresponsible followers, who were to form his Council and fill other offices in the Government, and thus plunder and cut out our country, leaving the Chinese your memorialists became alarmed, and aroused to a sense of sacred duty, and following the maxim that "resistance to tyrants is obedience to God," called public meetings in the month of October, 1869, at which it was resolved to repel their inroads by force if necessary, and this they found themselves compelled to do by a sense of self-preservation. Accordingly, a "Committee of Safety," with full power and authority, to raise and equip an army to defend our country against that lawless invasion, of which Committee JOHN BRICE was chosen President, and LEWIS RIEL Secretary. The first movement of the Committee was to cancel the corps of surveyors from our lands, and a call to arms to drive back the coming Governor and his followers was responded to by more than 600 men within twenty-four hours. That WILLIAM MCDOUGALL, the appointed Lieutenant-Governor, was met at Pembina, on the frontier by line, by a messenger from said Committee, with a written notice to him not to enter the country, without the consent of the people. Which notice, however, said MCDOUGALL wholly disregarded, and proceeded to establish himself as a Hudson's Bay Company fort, from which he was driven the next day to wit, the 2d of November, 1869, and with his whole band of followers crossed the boundary line into American territory. That the Committee, the day after expelling MCDOUGALL, took possession of Fort Garry, the seat of Government, without any resistance, and made it their head-quarters.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT.

That an election of delegates from all the districts of the country was ordered, who should meet in convention on the 16th day of the same month (November.) "To consider the political state of the country, and adopt such measures as might be deemed necessary for the future welfare of our people." That said order was responded to by every district, and the Convention, consisting of twenty-four members, met at the Council house, near Fort Garry, on the day appointed, and after due deliberation resolved on the 24th day of the same month, (November,) to establish a Provisional Government as the choice of the people, and proclaimed the same on the 8th day of December, 1869; declaring said Provisional Government to be the only rightful and lawful authority for the government of the country, commanding the respect and obedience of the people. That the Provisional Government was the choice of the people, was recognised and obeyed by the superseded Governor, Wm. MCTAVISH, and the Hudson's Bay Company in the Territory. Also was recognised and treated with, by four different Commissioners sent to the country, by the Canadian Government.

ACTS OF THE ENEMY.

That the said WM. MCDOUGALL, while residing at Pembina, United States Territory, issued a proclamation on the 1st day of December, 1869, transferring our country to that of the Dominion of Canada, and at the same time and place, plotted a scheme to bring about a civil war in our country, and to accomplish which, he issued a second proclamation calling all loyal men to arms, and commissioning one Col. DENNIS as his Lieutenant and conservator of the peace, empowering him, "to raise and equip an army, to arrest and disperse" our people, "to pull down, break up and destroy all forts or strongholds in which unlawful assemblages of armed men might be found in obedience to this command." Col. DENNIS endeavored to raise an army, but his appeal was answered only by the surveying party, and a few of the road-making party, all Canadians, and about 200 Indians, making in the aggregate about 260 men. That the Canadians established themselves in the house of one Dr SHULTZ, but were all taken prisoners by the Provisional Government authorities, and Col. DENNIS, who garrisoned Lower Fort Garry with his Indian soldiers, was immediately abandoned; the savage fleeing for safety to his wigwam. That it is well known that both MCDOUGALL and DENNIS while residing at Pembina, United States, had attempted to enlist American citizens, offering to arm and pay them to fight against the authorities and people of the Provisional Government; that he also endeavored to enlist American Indians to make war on our people, and also against the settlement of Pembina, United States Territory. That MCDOUGALL also commissioned agents, while at Pembina, to incite the Indians of our territory, especially that band of Sioux murderers of Minnesota and Dakota massacre fame, to make war on our people, and such Commissionists were duly honored by the Canadian Government, who paid the holders of them according to contract.

TREACHERY OF THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT.

That the Canadian Government on being informed of the course we had taken, and of our willingness to adjust all difficulties on an equitable basis, sent Commissioners to the Provisional Government, who freely conceded that the policy of the Dominion Government had been wrong; that it acted in ignorance of the true situation; that it strongly condemned the acts of its officials at Red River, who we feel assured, would have been applauded, had they succeeded in destroying the colony, depopulating the country, subjugating our people, and establishing Canadian authority upon their ruins. They stated that they were authorized to ascertain upon what conditions we would enter into Confederation, and urged the Provisional Government to send delegates with specified conditions to Ottawa, whose expenses they would pay; and guarantee them personal safety. Upon these representations being made, the Provisional Government sent delegates to Ottowa with the terms upon which we would enter the Confederation. That when our delegates stepped upon Canadian soil, two of the three were arrested and thrown into a felon's prison, on the warrant of a Police Magistrate, and afterward were compelled to submit to a mock trial, unworthy of any civilized people. That the delegates were recognized and treated with as those of the Provisional Government, and as the de facto Government of the country; both by Sir CLINTON MURDOC, representing the English Government, and by the Dominion Government. That negotiations were finally entered into with the Canadian Government, in which our delegates insisted upon the article contained in our "Bill of Rights," which called for a general and complete amnesty in these words:

"That none of the members of the Provisional Government, or any of those acting under them, be in any way held liable or responsible with regard to the movement, or any of the actions, which have led to the present."

And that unless such was first guaranteed, no conditions could or would be made. These conditions were accepted, and it was unconditionally agreed to by the Canadian Government, that whatever arrangements might be made, all would be null and void, unless a general and complete amnesty was first guaranteed. That the negotiations to enter into the Confederation terminated in what is known as the "Manitoba Act."

THE "PEACEMAKER" DEPUTATION.

That notwithstanding the pledges given for a general amnesty and other pacific measures, an armed expedition was fitted out and dispatched to our territory, without any official notice being ever sent to the Government or people as to its intent or purpose. That on the 1st day of June, 1869, the Provisional Government issued a protest against this expedition, and resolved to resist its entrance into our territory; and that Col WOLSELEY, commanding the expedition, issued a proclamation while on his march to Fort Garry, which he had sent for circulation among our people, in which he declared that his mission was one of peace and reconciliation, and called on the inhabitants to aid the expedition in its purposes and entrance into our territory. That the United States Government forbade the passage of the expedition through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal, in the State of Michigan, believing it to have been fitted out for hostile purposes against our Government and people, in order to coerce our people into confederation. That as we were led to believe, pledges were given to the American Government, to the effect that the expedition was a peaceful one. That all the pledges made to our delegates and people would be faithfully fulfilled both by the English and Dominion Governments, including personality the amnesty, and we completely disarmed, and as a sure pledge of good faith, we disbanded our army and relying on the sincerity of the English and Dominion Governments, and their purpose to carry out the pledges given, through our delegates, and received by their Commissioner, Right Rev. Bishop TACHE, and to the American Government in good faith, as we supposed, the Provisional Government placed no obstacle in the way of the expedition, but on the contrary dispatched a member of the Government with a party to aid and facilitate its entrance into the country. That this expedition, contrary to the authorized proclamation of its commander, and in violation of all the pledges given to us and to the American Government, by the representative of the English and the Dominion Governments, did enter our country for warlike purposes, as was manifested by its actions in throwing out scouts, detaching an advanced corps, arresting all parties met with on their march to Fort Garry, among whom were three members of the Legislature, and more especially by Col. WOLSELEY's order to his men, to march upon the Fort, and take it by storm, which was done, and its surrender accomplished, by the soldiers and members of the Provisional Government evacuating it upon the approach of the expedition, thus acting in accordance with the arrangements concluded with the Dominion Government. That the fall of Fort Garry did not satisfy this "peaceable expedition." The members of the Provisional Government, especially BIRBE & DOSCOUSH and LEPINE, should be captured and sacrificed, to satisfy the blood-thirsty desire of these invaders, for no other crime than that they knew their rights and dared to defend them. The three mentioned had to flee for safety to American territory.

OUTRAGES BY THE MEN OF THE EXPEDITION.

That Col. WOLSELEY, on the same day of the capture of Fort Garry, paid off his men, gave them three days' license, thus letting them loose from our people, whom they abused in their intoxication and disorder, in the most brutal manner. That from the 24th day of September to the 17th of October following, there was no protection for life or property from these marauders, over whom their officers, equal to themselves, had lost all moral control or control. That consequently outrages upon our unoffending people were of hourly occurrence, especially upon any of them who were members of or connected with the Government of their choice. One ELZIOR GOULER, an American citizen, while peacably pursuing his occupation, was attacked by a band of these marauders in uniform. He fled for safety toward Red River, which he attempted to swim across, but was closely pursued, and stoned to death while in the water, and his murderers are still unpunished. That all the American citizens in the town of Winnipeg, law abiding unquestionably, but naturally sympathizing with a people struggling in defence of the great principle of self-government, were treated in the most inhuman manner, and were forced to flee the country to Pembina, leaving, in most instances, their property behind.

ALL PLEDGES BROKEN.

And thus it will be seen, that, instead of observing in good faith, the solemn pledges of complete amnesty, of peaceful purposes, and kindly reconciliation, so often and so repeatedly made to our delegates and to our people, they proceeded to issue warrants for the arrest of LOUIS RIEL, President; WM. B. O'DONOGHUE, Secretary and Treasurer, and AMBROSE LEPINE, Adjutant-General, and a price was set upon their heads, seeking thus to consummate their perfidious treachery, by the foul crime of murder. That not a single pledge given by the English and Canadian Governments to our people, and to the Government of the United States, has been kept or performed, but on the contrary, each and every one as set forth in this memorial, has been outrageously and revengefully violated and trampled upon. And we, the memorialists, for and in behalf of ourselves, and the people whom we represent, acting upon the highest principles of civil and religious liberty, in asserting the great and sacred principle of self-government, recognized throughout the civilized world as an inalienable right, have been thus, for these things, coerced into a confederation with Canada, under false representations, broken promises, and violated pledges, and are left alone for a redress of our grievances, to an appeal to the Government of the United States, whose honor and plighted faith, as we humbly and earnestly maintain, are both solemnly pledged to see us righted.

THE UNITED STATES MUST INVESTIGATE.

That against such unwarranted outrages and unpardonable perfidy we do hereby, in the name of justice and in the face of the civilized world, solemnly protest, and earnestly ask your Excellency the President of the United States to cause an investigation to be made into the crimes and nature of our grievances, the pledges given to us and to your Government, and the extent to which those pledges have been violated, and to demand, in our behalf, that full reparation be made for all these violated pledges, and the injury and damages resulting to us therefrom. That impelled by a universal desire to be permitted peacefully to enjoy a Government of our own choosing, or to change our allegiance for political and commercial reasons to some other Government of our choice, and being thoroughly satisfied that neither peace nor prosperity can exist in our country under a Government which has by its bad faith, forfeited all claim upon the confidence of our people, and has instituted a war of extermination against us; and considering further the vast extent of barren and impassable territory, that separates us from the Dominion of Canada, we again earnestly appeal to your Excellency for the foregoing reasons, and many others which might be urged, to intercede in our behalf, and to take all such steps as your Excellency may deem appropriate and proper, to enable us to enjoy the blessings of life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness, under a Government of our own choice, or in union with a people, with whom we may think that we can enjoy these blessings. In concluding this memorial, we beg leave to subjoin a brief extract from the speech of the Governor-General of Canada, in proroguing the Parliament after the passage of the "Manitoba act," in reference to the expedition, and the expectations which our people are naturally led to entertain; the Governor-General proceeded as follows:

"The just and reasonable conditions which you have sanctioned in favor of the inhabitants, Manitobe, cannot fail to remove every trace of misapprehension which unhappily existed, and would place, instead, a feeling of confidence in your good will, and increasing advantages to be derived from joining the Dominion. This expedition, contrary to the authorized proclamation of its commander, and in violation of all the pledges given to us and to the American Government, by the representative of the English and the Dominion Governments, did enter our country for warlike purposes, as was manifested by its actions in throwing out scouts, detaching an advanced corps, arresting all parties met with on their march to Fort Garry, among whom were three members of the Legislature, and more especially by Col. WOLSELEY's order to his men, to march upon the Fort, and take it by storm, which was done, and its surrender accomplished, by the soldiers and members of the Provisional Government evacuating it upon the approach of the expedition, thus acting in accordance with the arrangements concluded with the Dominion Government. That the fall of Fort Garry did not satisfy this "peaceable expedition." The members of the Provisional Government, especially BIRBE & DOSCOUSH and LEPINE, should be captured and sacrificed, to satisfy the blood-thirsty desire of these invaders, for no other crime than that they knew their rights and dared to defend them. The three mentioned had to flee for safety to American territory.

The Waterbury Bank Robbery—The Accused Bound Over for Trial.

From the Burlington (Vt.) Times, Jan. 26.

The examination of the two New-York roughs, suspected of being coborned in the attempted robbery of the Waterbury Bank, closed on Monday at Waterbury. They gave the names of WILLIAM DAVIS and CHARLES BARTON, of New-York City. The strongest circumstances against them were that the conductor of Wednesday night's train, together with a Boston runner on board of the same train, remember these men, and that they carried a black traveling-bag exactly like the one found in the bank after the burglary, and noted the manner in which the bag was carried—in the lap, held firmly by both hands. Residents of Waterbury also saw them step from that train. After two days' examination they were held for trial in the sum of $20,000 each.

The bank has two large safes—one containing books and papers, and the other the funds of the corporation, consisting of $16,000, and about $60,000 belonging to citizens on deposit. The burglars knew which safe to attack—the old one. The safe has an iron box in the bottom, where the funds were formerly kept; but two years ago a steel chest was procured for that purpose, made of rolled steel, embedded by a combination lock. This chest was rolled out on the floor, but was not broken open, nor is it certain that any burglar could force it. All the tools of the burglars were left in the bank, consisting of an iron "jimmy," a dark lantern, a piece of seven pieces, each about one foot in length, a flask of powder, also a blower to blow the powder into small crevices, a roll of fuse, dark curtains to fit all the windows, a paper of tacks, a set of wedges from one-sixteenth of an inch to two inches in thickness, with leathers to cover the heads, a dark wax taper, a dark lantern, and hammers, twine for signals to the outside watchers, and all the outfit of expert operators. It is thought that some sudden fright caused the burglars to decamp, and that there must have been at least four of them, as the numerous tracks around the bank, as well as the alarm signals sounding from both the front and rear doors of the bank, indicated the presence of more than two or three.

Arrival of a German Steamer at New-Orleans—She is Chased by a French Gunboat.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Jan. 25.

The North German steam-ship Kaiserin, Capt. HERMANN C. FRANCK, from Bremen via Havana, arrived at her wharf, foot of Jackson-street, at noon yesterday. She has a general cargo, consigned to Mr. E. F. STOCKMEYER, agent of the North German Lloyds, and had nine cabin passengers, five from Havana, with about eighty in the steerage. The Kaiserin left Bremen on the 27th of December, and had exceedingly bad weather nearly all the way over.

Shortly after her arrival at Havana, the Kaiserin sighted a French gun-boat that has been laying off that port for some time, and who at once gave chase, but the Kaiserin continued straight into the harbor, where she anchored on the 18th inst. She found there the steam-ship Hannover, of the same line, and at sea with the gunboat Moluche, both virtually blockaded by the Frenchman outside, who no doubt was anxious to capture the Hannover, with the valuable cargo she took from this port on the 18th inst., consisting of 2,635 bales of cotton and 121 hogsheads of tobacco.

On the night of the 19th inst. both the Kaiserin and Hannover made preparations to leave port. At 10 o'clock P. M. they both weighed anchor and boldly started out to sea. About an hour thereafter the Kaiserin suddenly sighted the Frenchman within gunshot, but he was evidently taken unawares, for before he could bring his guns to bear, the Kaiserin was quickly out of range, and in two hours ran completely out of sight of the gun-boat. The telegraph has informed us that the Hannover was equally fortunate. We were not able to ascertain the name of the French gun-boat, but it was not the Bouvet, which fought the Meteor off Fort Pike, just outside the harbor of Havana, as she was still in that harbor, keeping her old antagonist company. The Kaiserin ran over from her anchorage in Havana to the bar at the mouth of the Mississippi, in forty-seven hours.

A Warning—The Dangers of Using Fire in Sleeping-Rooms.

From the Worcester Gazette, Jan. 28.

A narrow escape from an awful tragedy occurred this morning in this city, the recital of which should impress the minds of its readers with the importance of care and prudence in the management of coal fires. A mother and two daughters, residing on Summer-street, retired to rest last evening as usual, leaving a coal fire burning in their sleeping-room. Just before retiring the stove was filled with fresh coal, and by some oversight the damper to the stove was turned so as to prevent the proper escape of the gas into the chimney. All the parties went to sleep without discovering the mistake, and slept quietly the night, till 5 o'clock this morning, when the mother awoke, with an intense headache; she was sufficiently conscious to suspect the cause, and attempted to rise, but was unable. She aroused one of her daughters with some difficulty, and directed her to open the window, which was at length accomplished, the sufferer falling once or twice in attempting to cross the room.

The admission of fresh air aroused all the sufferers, but brought with it excruciating pains in the head, and terrible nausea and vomiting. Neighbors were called in, and Dr Fairbanks was summoned, and after a long period of intense suffering all the parties were relieved, and out of danger.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Although several sales were advertised to take place at the Exchange yesterday (Jan. 30,) but one was effected and this of no special importance. The transaction consisted of a sale by LAWRENCE & FLEURY, of the right, title and interest of HENRY KOHN, in and to four lots of land, located in Union City, Hudson County, N. J. The sale was under the direction of F. D. B. KENNEDY, receiver, and made to satisfy a judgment of $600. H. L. HEWLETT purchased the claim for $50. Three adjournments of legal sales closed the business of the day as follows: By E. H. LUDLOW, & Co., foreclosure sale, ALFRED T. ACKIT referee; property, one lot south-east corner of Fourth-avenue and Sixty-first-street, adjourned until Feb. 6. By JAMES M. MILLER, foreclosure sale, D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., referee; property, one lot on north side of Seventeenth-street, 24 feet east of Second-avenue, adjourned until Feb. 15. By ROBERTS & MCGUIRE, foreclosure sale, GRATZ NATHAN referee; property, three-story brick building with stores, and lot Nos. 276 and 276½ Grand-street, north-east corner of Goerck-street, adjourned until Feb. 27.

Today, at the Exchange, E. H. MULLER, P. R. WILKINS & Co. will offer at public auction the valuable lot of land with the brick buildings thereon, situated on the west side of the Bowery, between Grand and Hester streets, and known as No. 116. The lot is a full sized one, being 25 by 100. A notice of this sale was inadvertantly omitted yesterday, in our list of transactions for the week. Today, also, ROBERTS & MCGUIRE, at a Supreme Court sale, will dispose of the property known as Nos. 18 and 20 Platt-street, corner of Gold, comprising two lots, with four-story brick buildings erected on each, nearly covering the same. At another legal sale the same firm will sell two four-story brick houses and lots numbered 303 and 305 East Thirty-fourth-street, between First and Second avenues. The last-named lots are each 16x55.4. In addition to the above A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO. will offer some 600 acres of land, located in Suffolk County, L. I., on the line of the South-side Railway, and easy of access from the City. The prospective value of property of this description is great, and from this cause, if no other, the proposed transaction should attract the attention of capitalists. One or two other sales are also bulletined to take place, and business to-day, unless the sales should be adjourned, promises to be quite active.

At private sale E. H. LUDLOW & Co., No. 8 Pine-street, offers a very desirable country residence, located at Madison, N. J., within one mile from a railway station. The property comprises seventy-one acres in a high state of cultivation, with a modern three-story French roof mansion, in size 50x75 feet. On the grounds are also erected greenhouses and graperies, porter's lodge, gardener's house, barns, stables, and all other necessary out-buildings.

The following transactions are reported as having been recently made at private sale:

By W. H. RAYNOR, No. 5½ Pine-street.

A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO.—THIS A. DAY, POSITIVE SALE OF LONG ISLAND LANDS—Two tracts 230 and 300 acres, between "Clubhouse" property and lands of Hon. Wm. H. Ludlow.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

TO MANUFACTURERS, CAPITALISTS AND SALEM BUSINESS MEN.—Valuable water-power, situated in the United States Land Office, District of New-Jersey, in the village of THE ELIZABETHTOWN STEAM MANUFACTURING COMPANY, bankrupt.

The property will be offered for public auction, on the premises mentioned, by said Bankrupt, Commissioner of Elizabethport, N. J., on MONDAY, the 20th day of February, A. D. 1871, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the entire valuable real estate of said Company, consisting of Twenty-two and one-half acres less between Water and South sts., 1,000 feet, with front on both streets, and extending to the Elizabeth River, bulkheads, docks and wharves, with sample channel, dredged for steamers. The mill is fully equipped, of large capacity, and in condition for immediate operation. This property has a frontage on the Elizabeth River of about 700 feet, with substantial and commodious docks; the mill has been profitably operated for years, and the buildings are extensive and massive brick structures, viz.:—The wheel factory, a plot of ground on 1st-st., 80x120 feet, with two substantial frame-work shops, 32x38 and 30x35 feet, well adapted and used wood-work and dressing-room.

The Spoke Mills, consisting of a plot of ground, 200x370 feet, with front of the creek of about 80 feet, on which are substantial docks with sufficient water for vessels of 100 tons. The buildings consist of a new frame factory, with tin roof, built with general reference to strength and stability, 35x80, with ample engine-room addition and engine of large capacity, with shafting and connections all of the best and most approved pattern, in complete order for immediate use. Also, frame warehouse and office building, slate roof, 42x100, with spacious docks and storage room.

1st—A tract on 1st-st., 125 feet by about 300 feet, running through to Elizabeth Creek.

2d—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

3d—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

4th—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

5th—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

6th—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

7th—A tract, 100 feet by about 300 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

8th—A tract, 100 feet by about 224 feet, next westerly of the last-mentioned.

9th—A tract, 66 feet by about 276 feet, with front on the creek of about 40 feet.

Each of these tracts terminates a front upon Elizabeth Creek, which is navigable for vessels of moderate draught, and the locality possessing the simplest facilities for shipping, and the property offering the unusual advantages for manufacturing operations of any description.

Also, 9 lots, Nos. 21, 22, 24, 26 and 28, and parts of lots Nos. 19 and 20, situated on Elizabeth-st., Elizabeth-ave., and designated by the above numbers on Block No. 49, on a map of the new manufacturing town of Elizabethport, on the side of the Elizabeth River of the Commercial Dock Company.

Also, 145 pine logs, 45 oak logs, and 288 hemlock logs.

Further particulars of the place of the undersigned, where a map of the property can be seen.

A JANUARY THAW.

Mild Weather Once More—Indications of the Thermometer—The Snow Melting but not Gone.

The recent seven days' wonder, with its sharp cold snap, and sudden snow tempest, has merged into a genuine old-fashioned January thaw. The relaxation of temperature was not as unwelcome or unexpected change.

Everybody had felt frost-nipped and snow-bound. Throughout Sunday night snow-water came trickling down from the roofs like mimic waterfalls. The street gutters carried off great quantities of water, which tumbled boisterously in dirty colors into the culverts, and rushed through the sewers riverward.

In too many instances the sidewalks were yet properly cleaned until afternoon. Some of these were in front of business places, where, as it happened, pedestrians were made to fall and sustain bruises and soil their garments. Gangs of laborers were busily engaged on the various railroad tracks in shoveling away the slush. This they heaped upon the already huge snow-banks on either side of the streets, rendering them hideous and loathsome objects to the eye. These embankments have buried many of the fire hydrants completely out of sight, which will be no slight task for the firemen to remedy during the progress of some possible conflagration.

SNOW-BALLING.

Good-natured people will never utter a protest against the innocent sports of boyhood, even though at times they become annoying. Snow-balling in itself, is a harmless, healthful and pleasant sport. It is neither right nor safe that it should be indulged in to any extent in the crowded streets of a great city. There is not only peril to windows and other property, but to the persons of pedestrians. A City ordinance is in existence which attaches a penalty to this misdemeanor, but, like those regarding ball-pitching and kite-flying, it has been a dead letter. There is now an absolute necessity for its enforcement. Street urchins, with unconscionable mischief, not satisfied with pelting helpless drivers and others who cannot pursue and punish them, with soft snow, make balls with slush pressed hard in the hand until they become almost as solid as ice. Sometimes sharp-edged ice is an ingredient, and even stones have been concealed in slush and hurled with great force against passers-by, causing bruises or more serious effects. The possible result of such shots is murderous. Persons have thus been knocked insensible, eyes and ears have been painfully disfigured, and arms badly lamed. Expensive dresses, furs, velvets, and other ladies' attire, have been damaged or ruined by these rascalities. Yesterday the old man engaged to sweep the crossing before a prominent Broadway store was set upon by a gang of nearly two hundred of such young imps, who pelted his advertising uniform with ice-balls. Finally being bruised and enraged beyond endurance, he took the law and his broomstick in his own hands, gave chase and belabored the boys until they cried "enough." No policeman presumed to interfere with the laudable severity of the old man. A large-size ball containing a stone was sent crashing through a Broadway car window, narrowly grazing a lady's head.

SLEIGHING.

Yesterday's thaw told effectively against the sleighing, although in the Park and along the upper Boulevards it was yet quite good. The bells had no such merry jingling as on previous days, but those who rode in it were as jolly. A large number of all sorts of vehicles went out, among them many elegant and well-known turn-outs. The absence of the rowdyism and drunken revelry that disgraced the echoes of Sunday night was most agreeably remarked.

The Department of Public Parks report that, from 7 o'clock of the morning of the 27th, to 7 o'clock of the morning of the 28th, the sleigh-keepers at the Central Park, it is shown that the number of sleighs which entered the Park during the last few days is as follows: On Friday, the 27th inst., 13,980; on Saturday, the 28th inst., 16,660, and on Sunday, the 29th, 11,460.

CARS, STAGES AND FERRIES.

Large quantities of ice were in the harbor and rivers. Much of it seems to have broken loose from some point in Haverstraw or Peekskill Bays, and come down with the morning tide. The obstructions will probably disappear in a short time, as the fields are composed of soft material, and are even now breaking up into loose parts. The embargo is worse at the end of the cable-line. Should a strong westerly wind set in, driving the loose fields of ice, and crowding it against the New-York shore, the river would be rendered almost impassable.

OVERHEAD.

The day was clear and beautiful, with a very thin veil of haze lingering after the departed snow-clouds. The thermometer at 7 A. M. was 29°; at 12 M., 40°; at 3 P. M., 41°; at 9 P. M., 39°, with a downward tendency. The thaw nearly ceased at sunset, and the sky was overclouded, when a frost came and stiffened the slush puddings in the streets. The Central Park Meteorological report for the last week presents the following facts and figures:

Barometer—Mean, 30.114 inch; maximum at P. M., Jan. 26, 30.492 inch; minimum at 1 A. M., Jan. 27, 29.683 inch; range, .809 inch. Thermometer—Mean, 15.4°; maximum at 9a. Mon. A. M., Jan. 23, 38.0°; minimum at 6 A. M., Jan. 28, zero; range, 38.0°. Jan. 28, snow from 2 P. M. to 12 P. M.—amount of water, .11 inch; Jan. 24, snow from 9h. 30m. A. M. to 9 A. M.—amount of water .03 inch; Jan. 25, snow from 8:45 A. M. to 12 P. M.—amount of water, .12 inch; Jan. 27, snow from 9h. 30m. A. M. to 2 A. M.—amount of water, .02 inch; Jan. 28, snow from 6 P. M. to 12 P. M.—amount of water, .08 inch; total amount of water for week, 1.02 inch; distance the wind ran during the week 1,914 miles; total depth of snow for week, 18 inches.

The East River between Riker's Island and Hart's Island was entirely frozen over all day yesterday, and the Sound steamers could with difficulty force their way through it. The steamer Hope, on her way to Hart's Island, yesterday, was obliged to spend a period of two hours, and it was only after the most vigorous exertion that she succeeded in forcing her way through. It is utterly impossible for any sailing craft to get through the ice as it is at present.

THE LATE JUDGE NEWTON.

Funeral Services at Grace Church, Brooklyn—Adjournment of the United States Courts.

The funeral services of late United States Commissioner CHARLES W. NEWTON took place, yesterday afternoon, at Grace Church, Brooklyn. The attendance was large and the services were of an impressive character. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Judge Benedict, United States Court; Judge Gilbert, Supreme Court; Ex-Judge Beebe, C. Van Santvord, J. W. C. Leveridge, Kenneth G. White, Clerk United States Circuit Court, New-York, B. D. Silliman, and Gen. Crooke. Commissioners Jones and Winslow, of the Eastern District New-York, associates of the late Mr. Newton, and the following Commissioners of the United States Courts of New-York, Messrs. Betts, Shields, Osborn, Stilwell, Davenport, Owens, Metcalf, and Gatman, Marshal Dallon, the officers and attaches of the Eastern District Court, and many members of the Bar, were among the mourners. Those who were associated with the late Commissioner in an official manner spoke of him in terms of unqualified praise, and expressed their sorrow for his loss, while those who knew him privately extolled the worth of his social character. The body was placed in a plain rose-wood coffin, covered with black cloth, and surmounted with silver fastenings. The plate bore the following inscription:

CHARLES W. NEWTON,
Died Jan. 27, 1871,
In the
49th year of his age.

Rev. Drs. DILLER, of St. Luke's, DICKINSON, of Hoboken, and PADDOCK, of Grace Church, officiated, and after the solemn service of the Episcopal Church was read, Dr. DILLER, of whose church the late Mr. NEWTON was for some time a member, made a few remarks appropriate to the mournful occasion. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the remains were taken to Green-Wood, and deposited in the receiving vault prior to final interment. Mr. NEWTON leaves a wife and four daughters and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss.

At the opening of the United States District Court, Eastern District, United States District Attorney ALLEN eulogized Mr. NEWTON, and moved an adjournment as a mark of respect to his memory. Judge BEEBE seconded the motion, and eloquently supported it.

Judge BENEDICT said: "The motion made is eminently proper in the case of a man so long connected with the Courts of the United States as Mr. NEWTON has been. I knew him when he was at the bar and had occasion to observe the zeal with which he performed his duties as United States Commissioner. I had, also, occasion to know his mode of procedure when acting as Master in examining cases in Chancery. I subsequently had occasion to know of his character as displayed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court and United States Commissioner for this District, and I can bear my testimony to his integrity, and to his industry, and to his courtesy in all these varied offices. He was a plain man, of fair ability, charged with duties as United States Commissioner, which are very responsible and often delicate. He was able to perform those duties to the satisfaction of the community and without giving offense to the parties interested. His reward, which is the only reward possible for a public servant in that capacity in this world, he obtained—the good opinion of the gentlemen with whom he was brought in contact officially. I have no doubt that the motion made on behalf of the Government and the remarks made on behalf of the Bar, express the opinion of the profession in New-York and in Brooklyn, and that that is the opinion formed by almost every person connected with the Bar that ever had occasion to do business in the Courts of the United States. It is proper in such an event, as a tribute of respect to the faithful public servant, that this Court do adjourn. The motion is seconded. Appropriate remarks were made by Messrs. SCUDDER and DORLAND, and Judge BLATCHFORD.

THE IRISH EXILES.

Contributions for their Support—They Accept the Hospitalities of the City.

The exiles of Erin were visited yesterday by a delegation from the Knights of St. Patrick, who sought an interview with them for the purpose of giving them a formal welcome. The exiles selected this evening as the time when arrangements could be made.

The lines of the Fenians "have fallen in pleasant places." Already has a communication been received by them from Hon. RICHARD O'GORMAN informing them of the appropriation by the City of $15,000 to defray the current expenses of the exiles, and asking them to accept it as a part only of what is yet to come. JOHN MCCLURE has been appointed Secretary in charge of the distribution of this fund.

The Joint-Committee of the Common Council appointed to make arrangements for the reception of the Fenians recently released from British prisons, met at 3 P. M. yesterday in the chamber of the Board of Aldermen. Mr. WM. M. TWEED, Jr., was also present. About 8½ a delegation of the Fenians, fourteen in number, headed by Mr. O'DONOVAN ROSSA, were conducted to the chamber by the Marshal-at-Arms, and were welcomed by Alderman DIMON, Chairman of the Committee. After partaking of champagne and a collation, Mr. ROSSA said that as the hospitalities of the City had been tendered to them they could not of course decline them, and in a day or two they would confer further with the Committee on this subject. By their previous action, he said, they had not intended to slight any political party, but at the same time they did not wish to be identified with any party. Alderman ROBINSON said that the Common Council represented no political party. The hospitalities tendered were on behalf of the people of New-York.

The delegation shortly afterward retired.

Death of County Auditor Watson—Coroner's Inquest—How the Accident Occurred.

Mr. JAMES WATSON, County Auditor, who, on Tuesday last, while out driving, sustained fatal injuries by his vehicle's coming in collision with another, died at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. He was insensible for many hours before his death. Mr. WATSON had held the position of County Auditor under several administrations. He was in his forty-fifth year at the time of his decease, though his personal appearance generally led to the belief that he was much younger. He leaves a widow and two children, who are said to be amply provided for. Yesterday the Common Council passed resolutions of respect for the memory of deceased and appointed a Joint Committee to make arrangements for his funeral. The flags on the City Hall were also placed at half-mast during the day.

Coroner HERRMAN, assisted by Dr. JOHN BEACH, last evening held an inquest at the late residence of the deceased, No. 215 Madison-avenue. The only witness examined was SYLVANUS S. TOWNSEND, the coachman, who testified that Tuesday evening the deceased and himself left the house in a sleigh drawn by two horses, for a ride out on the road. They proceeded without incident to the club-house of HARRY BERTHOLD, and after stopping there a few minutes, started upon their return. Deceased was driving, and when they reached One Hundred and Thirtieth-street and Eighth-avenue, going slowly and well over on the right side of the road, a horse attached to a sleigh going out suddenly, turned out of the proper track, dashed across the road, in between Mr. WATSON's horses, breaking the neck yoke, knocking down the off horse, and then rearing over the dash-board of the sleigh. One of his feet struck Mr. WATSON on the forehead, and the other went down between him and TOWNSEND, and the latter was thrown from the sleigh. He jumped up as soon as possible, and at Mr. WATSON's request, led him to the Club-house, he being able to walk. On arriving there, Dr. FRANKLIN, of the Police Central office, was fortunately found, and the wound having been dressed, Mr. WATSON was then taken home. The man who drove the horse which had struck Mr. WATSON, whom TOWNSEND believed to have been intoxicated, at the accident, would not have occurred, was subsequently arrested by Capt. WILSON, of the Thirty-second Precinct Police, but the deceased refusing to make a complaint against him, he was not held. After the examination of this witness, a permit was given for the burial of the body, and the case was adjourned for further hearing. It appears that upon arriving at BERTHOLD's, Mr. WATSON said that there was too rough a crowd upon the road, which fact accounts for his quick start homewards. The man whose carelessness caused the death is known to the Police, and will probably be again arrested.

Breaking Up a Temperance Meeting—Not so Funny as Was Expected.

THOMAS HICKEY, JOHN BRADY and WILLIAM DRISCOLL, alias Bloom, were arraigned at Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge COX on a charge of committing a serious assault on MICHAEL LYNCH. It appeared that on Sunday evening HICKEY and a gang of Eighth Ward roughs were drinking freely in the liquor-saloon of JAMES BEGLIN, in Thirteenth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, and being in want of fun suited to their dispositions it was suggested that they make a descent on the meeting of the Father Mathew Temperance Society, which was then being held in the hall adjoining the house. HICKEY, being the recognized leader of the party, was the first to enter the room, and immediately created such an uproar that Mr. LYNCH, an officer of the Society, was compelled to eject him. In this incident HICKEY did not receive the support from his companions that he calculated upon, and being infuriated at its result, he left them in disgust, and sought BRADY and DRISCOLL to assist him in wreaking a summary vengeance on LYNCH. With this intention they waited until the meeting broke up, and when Mr. LYNCH came out on the street HICKEY dealt him a terrible blow on the head with a bung-starter, instantly prostrating him. They would not have been satisfied with inflicting on him this punishment, were it not for the interference of some bystanders, who arrested and gave them into custody. Judge COX fully committed them for trial at the Court of General Sessions.

Two Suicides and One Attempted Suicide.

A young woman named ELLEN KING attempted to drown herself yesterday afternoon, by jumping overboard at the Fulton Ferry. She was rescued and taken to the Second Precinct Station-house, but refused to give either her residence or the motive that led to her attempt at self-destruction.

Shortly after 7 o'clock last night an unknown woman jumped overboard from one of the Division-avenue ferry-boats, as it was entering the dock on the Brooklyn side, and was drowned. The body was subsequently recovered. She was well dressed, and bore all the marks of a person belonging to good society.

A young man named LOUIS OLIGER, residing at No. 104 Debevoise-street, killed himself instantly, last night, by discharging a pistol in his mouth. The cause is supposed to have been despondency, brought on by being out of work.

Indictments by the United States Grand Jury.

The United States Grand Jury presented indictments against the following-named prisoners at the Circuit Court, before Judge BLATCHFORD, yesterday: PETER JOHNSON, CHARLES PETERSON and CHARLES THOMPSON, for creating mutiny on board the ship Shakmuc; JAMES HARTNETT and URGOSH RADORAVLOVITZ, letter-carriers, for secreting and embezzling money letters, and LOUIS MEYER and JAMES S. COLGATE for having in possession, with intent to pass, counterfeit money. Other indictments were also presented, but the parties not being in custody, their names are suppressed for the present.

Stabbing Affray in Twenty-Sixth-Street.

Sunday evening an affray occurred among the inmates of a disreputable house in West Twenty-sixth-street, during which Mrs. EMMA KING, the proprietress, struck one of the women named WISE on the head with a large bowl, inflicting a serious scalp wound. A visitor, EDGAR HERMANN, of No. 142 West Twenty-seventh-street, interfering was then attacked by Mrs. KING, who was armed with a knife, and he received three severe wounds. No arrests have yet been made in the case.

A Jersey City Mystery.

Two weeks ago, Coroner BURNS, of Jersey City, was notified of the dying condition of a Mrs. SUSANNAH MURTHA, who resided at the corner of Jersey-avenue and Grand-street. It was represented that she was suffering from the effects of a fall or personal violence. Coroner BURNS found her insensible and her body much bruised. On making inquiries, the Coroner learned that she was the house where a man named Hickey lived, and in the altercation that was then either beaten or thrown down stairs. She lingered until late on Saturday night, when she died. The Coroner will hold an inquest to-morrow evening.

Sudden Death of a Prominent New-Jersey Detective.

Detective GEORGE STRATFORD, one of the most ingenious and prominent detectives in New-Jersey, died suddenly at his residence, No. 248 Bay-street, Jersey City, last night. Detective STRATFORD, though young, being in his thirtieth year, had been connected with the Jersey City force for five years, and had made himself a wide reputation as an acute detective throughout New-Jersey, and in New-York and Philadelphia. He was popular with the Jersey City force, with every member of which he was personally acquainted, and he was deeply felt. The officers of duty, gathered in little knots at the different precincts, and his loss was a general theme of conversation. The force will wear mourning badges and will be present in a body at the funeral ceremonies, which will take place from St. Peter's Church, on Thursday.

The death was a remarkably sudden one. STRATFORD was on duty on Sunday and made no particular complaint of being unwell. He was, however, taken violently with convulsions of the lungs and died in less than twenty-four hours. Dr. VONDAT was first called in, but finding that his services would be of no avail, Drs. LUTKINS and REEVES were called in for consultation. They were unable to afford him any relief. Deceased leaves a young wife and two children, to whom a testimonial will be given by the members of the Police force.

Sentence of Griffin, the Murderer.

In the Middlesex County Court of Oyer and Terminer, at New-Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, WALTER GRIFFIN, who was convicted of killing THOMAS DUFY, was called up for sentence. The Court, in passing sentence, alluded to the fair and able manner in which his trial had been conducted, and the prisoner was then sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and a fine of $1,000.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

It appears that Capt. EDWARD R. BLUNT, the gentleman who died in St. Luke's Hospital from the effects of laudanum, did not obtain the drug from any friend, as was previously stated. Mr. BLUNT carried into the hospital a satchel containing several vials of laudanum, which, through the negligence of his nurses, escaped observation.

The examination of students at the College of the City of New-York commenced yesterday morning and will continue during the week. The year began with about 800 scholars on the roll, but the number is reduced, by various causes, to about 600. The programme for the examination yesterday was as follows: Senior Class—Spherical Astronomy, Prof. COMSTOCK examiner; Junior Class—Physics, Prof. DORENUS examiner; Sophomore Class—Calculus and Moral Philosophy, Profs. DOCHARTY and HUNTSMAN; Freshman Class—Descriptive Geometry, Prof. KOERNER and Tutors WOOLF and KNOX, examiners; Introductory Class—English Language, Prof. BARNUM and Tutors FINNER, BURNS and AMES. The examinations of this class will be examined every day this week in other branches.

JOHN WRIGHT, of No. 29 Centre-street, was found last evening insensible in the hallway of No. 22 Duane-street, and died while being carried to the Sixth Precinct Station-house. MARGARET BRIEMS, aged fifty-six years, of No. 1,056 Second-avenue, last evening fell on the sidewalk on the corner of Forty-ninth-street and Third-avenue, and was taken up to be carried to the Nineteenth Precinct Station-house, and upon arriving there she was found to be dead. In both these cases inquests will be held today.

M. VOTABLE, the Treasurer of the Comité de Secours in this City, reports that since last accounts $6,073 36 have been received in aid of the French Relief Fund, making, with the previous subscriptions, a total of $78,466 66, of which $67,026 34 have been remitted to France. The latest subscriptions are $624, by the members of the Cercle Française de l'Harmonie; $630 by private subscription, and $328 75 from Deer Lodge, Montana.

Coroner HERMANN was notified, yesterday, to hold an inquest in the case of Mrs. DELIA DIXON, aged sixty, who died at No. 145 West Twenty-fourth-street, from injuries sustained on April, 1869, by being thrown down in a Seventh-avenue car, by the sudden movement of the vehicle, as she was endeavoring to get off.

The Farragut Monument Association will hold a meeting at the Naval Office to-morrow afternoon. The friends of this enterprise will be pleased to learn that the subscriptions to the fund are coming in rapidly, and that in all probability the amount necessary will soon be obtained, so that the order can be given for the execution of the work.

Detective FINN, of the Fourth-Ward, yesterday detected THOMAS DONNELLY and CHRISTOPHER FULLER, both boys of tender age, in the act of picking pockets of gentlemen in Printing-house-square, while pretending to sell newspapers. When the prisoners were arraigned before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, they were sent to the Reformatory school on Hart's Island.

The soldiers' orphans distribution of valuable diamonds, watches, &c., it is announced, will positively take place on Saturday evening, Feb. 4, at the store of J. McB. DAVIDSON, No. 581 Broadway. But few tickets remain unsold, and persons desiring them must call soon.

Among the passengers by the steamer City of London on Monday, was Mr. WILLIAM APLIN, for several years the efficient manager of the office of the New-York Associated Press, who will hereafter hold a responsible position in the Lloyd's agency.

JOHN SCHEINFELDENBERGER, a German, fifty-four years of age, living at No. 50 Sheriff-street, attempted to commit suicide last evening by cutting his throat with a razor, but did not succeed in causing death. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

A newsboy named SPAIN, who lives at No. 163 East Fifty-first-street, yesterday fell from the front platform of a Third-avenue car at the corner of Thirty-eighth-street, and had his right hand crushed by a wheel of the car passing over it. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

MARY DUNHAM, eighty years of age, living at No. 245 East Twenty-eighth-street, was run over yesterday by a coal-cart, near her residence, and had her right foot crushed. The driver was arrested, but as she refused to make a complaint he was not held.

Mme. ANTOINE BECKER-GRAHN, a German actress, who, in her day, ranked high in her profession as a tragedienne, died in this City on Thursday night after a prolonged illness, in poor circumstances.

Col. ALEXANDER, formerly a Supervisor of Internal Revenue of New-Orleans, was arrested in Boston, last week, for an alleged defalcation. His arrest was kept so private that it was not known until he was brought into Marshal BARRETT's office yesterday morning on his way to Washington.

The assessment rolls for the widening and straightening of Broadway are open to the public, in the office of the County Clerk, in the new Court-house.

About twenty writs of certiorari have been issued by Judge BLATCHFORD in Customs suits commenced in the State Courts against Ex-Collector GRINNELL.

The Society Vorwaerts, yesterday, in commemoration of the fall of the French capital, forwarded to EMIL SAUER, the Treasurer of the German Relief Fund, $50 in aid of the wounded.

BROOKLYN.

The Special Committee of the Republican General Committee, appointed at the last meeting of that body to take evidence in regard to the contested election in the Tenth Ward, met last evening, and heard both parties, WASS and COOK, at great length. At one period of the investigation it looked as if there might be a row, owing to the fact that Mr. HASBROUCK accused Mr. WASS of bribing Democrats to vote at the Republican primary, but the difficulty was finally smoothed over, and the Committee adjourned, to report next Tuesday night.

The thirty-third annual ball of the Emerald Benevolent Association, in aid of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, took place last night in the Academy of Music. The attendance was very large and embraced many of Brooklyn's most prominent and respectable citizens. The affair was in every respect a complete success.

Shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning, the house of Mrs. MATILDA PEARSON, at No. 136 North Fifth-street, E. D., was entered by a band of burglars, who thoroughly ransacked the premises. In the course of their raid they entered the sleeping-room of Mrs. PEARSON, who, although present and awake at the time, was so thoroughly intimidated by looks and threats that she did not dare to open her mouth until they had made good their escape.

In the Common Council, yesterday, on motion of Alderman HERMAN, the Clerk of the Board was directed to inform the street railroad companies that for the future they must take measures to prevent their snow-plows from throwing the snow from the streets on to the pavements and against the surrounding buildings.

The annual report of the Park Commissioner for 1870, is now ready, and will be presented at the next meeting of the Common Council. By the report it appears that the receipts on Prospect Park for the year were $647,459, and the expenditures, $647,078.

The Ball, Hop and Pleasure Club will give their annual full-dress ball, at Irving Hall, this evening. Everything has been prepared on a grand scale, and the members and their guests are sure to have a delightful time.

United States Deputy Collector GRINNELL, yesterday, seized, on Fulton-street, 176 gallons of illicit whisky, and a horse and wagon. The Marshal took possession of the property.

MARIAN THOMPSON, a well-known pickpocket, was arrested, yesterday, by Detective DILLY while busily plying her vocations among the spectators at Commissioner NEWTON's funeral.

NEW-JERSEY.

A special meeting of the Queens County Supervisors was held yesterday at the Court-house, North Hempstead, to consider the new Court-house question. All the members were present, as also were large delegations from Hempstead, Oyster Bay and North Hempstead. The Supervisors could not agree. Only two votes were given in favor of any particular location. The people will appeal to the Legislature.

A new road bill has been proposed and forwarded to the Legislature, entitled "An Act to improve highways in Queens County." The bill provides that a tax of twelve cents upon each $100 shall be levied upon each town, the money to be deposited with the Supervisor. Each town is to be divided into five road districts, and each district contracted out. The bill makes it a misdemeanor for the Commissioners to be interested in the contract, and allows them $3 50 per day.

In honor of the return of Mr. CONRAD POPPENHUSEN, who has been absent in Europe the past year, the citizens of College Point gave a supper, last evening. The Poppenhusen Institute was illuminated in honor of the occasion.

The residents of Glen Cove propose to secure a vote which will be in favor of incorporating as a village under the general law, and will accordingly take a vote on the subject within a few days.

An inquest was held, yesterday afternoon, by Coroner TWEKSBURY, of Long Island City, on the body of LAWRENCE KELLY, an old man ninety-five years of age, who died suddenly of old age, on Sunday, at the residence of his son in Ravenswood. Verdict in accordance with the facts.

On Monday morning a burglar was shot at by a young man, stopping at the house of Mr. THOMAS MILLER, in Finshing, while attempting to feloniously enter it. It is thought the shot-booter was hit from the outcry made, but no trace of him was found.

NEW-JERSEY.

Two Italians giving the name of LAPENNEY, were playing, yesterday, on Sussex-street, Jersey City, when a drunken man named FALLON interfered, breaking their instruments and knocking one of them down with a coal shovel. The man then attacked FALLON with a knife, inflicting a serious wound in the left breast. The Italians, who bore evidence of having been badly assaulted, were held to await the result of FALLON's wounds.

The Common Council of Jersey City met in Committee of the Whole, last evening, to consider the vexed question of the Thirteenth-street assessments. Mr. STILLMAN and several other New-Yorkers who own property in Hoboken addressed the body in relation to the onerous and exacting burden of taxation about to be imposed upon them, and maintained that the assessments proposed to be raised were unjust, impolitic and unpleasantly exorbitant. The Council adjourned before arriving at any definite result concerning the matter.

According to the annual report of Adjt.-Gen. STRYKER, of the New-Jersey State National Guard, there have forty-nine organized companies of infantry in the State, two companies in process of organization, and nine vacancies left, according to law, for those counties yet without a regiment of infantry. There are, also, two batteries of artillery. The Adjutant-General recommends the substitution of breech-loading rifles for those now belonging to the State, the change to be made at the earliest opportunity.

During Sunday night J. J. DEATROILLER's powder-factory, at Greenville accidentally exploded, and the building was damaged to the extent of $5,000. There was but little powder on the premises at the time, and considering the 100 men employed in the establishment, the explosion occurring during working hours, would in all probability have been attended with far more serious consequences.

Mrs. ELIZABETH SHARPE, an old lady of Haskettstown, formerly died intestate, leaving property valued at $80,000. The heirs are clamorously divided as to the proper administrators. A caveat has been filed against the appointees of a majority of the heirs, citations have been issued, and considerable litigation ensued. An Act to the Legislature has been retained, who will probably get the cream of the estate before the litigation ends.

The young men of the Presbyterian churches in Elizabeth have purchased a plot of land with a building thereon, and dedicated it to Christian uses last Sunday. The enterprise grew out of a series of open-air meetings, held near the Lackawanna Plane for the benefit of boatmen and others.

The Newark Germans are particularly hilarious over the capitulation of Paris, and the saloons are crowded with people watching and debating on every word of news. On Sunday, the Hill, where these people mostly congregate, was alive with joyous throngs.

The annual fair for the benefit of St. Mary's Orphan Asylum, in Newark, netted that institution $8,000.

ARMY AND NAVY RECORD.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30.—The Secretary of the Navy has addressed a letter to the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, asking the passage of a special act authorizing the enlistment of 200 men for service at the Dry-dock at Kittery, to constitute a permanent crew for manning the practice-ship. If, in this way, the crew of the practice-ship could be of picked men and permanent, the ship would always be in order, the instruction would tell more at once with the well-arranged system of a vessel in discipline, and there would be advantages, with that of being freed from the personal influences of bad assignments, which are not uncommon. Naval Constructor Davidson has been detached from special duty in the Bureau of Construction, and ordered to the Boston Navy-yard. The orders of Chief-Engineer Lukery to the Navy-yard, Boston, are revoked. First Assistant Engineer Clark Bisher has been detached from special duty at New-York, and ordered to the Tuscarora.

The association of the President, the Board to relize disabled officers, established at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, by special orders of Aug. 8, 1870, has been dissolved, and the officers composing it have been ordered to join their stations. Surgeon C. C. Pennington has been ordered to relieve Surgeon Tuttle, as Medical Director at Head-quarters of the Missouri. First Lieut. C. M. Edwards has been placed on the retired list because of incapacity, from wounds received in the line of active duty. Capt. George E. Preble has been ordered to command the naval rendezvous, at Boston, relieving Commander Stembel, who is ordered to command the North Squadron of the Pacific fleet, from which Commander William E. Taylor is detached and awaits orders.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The market for American Securities opened firm and Stocks steady. At 12½ P. M. Securities were flat, and at 1½ P. M. dull, closing quiet. At 4 P. M. Illinois Central shares were steady at 110. There was considerable fluctuation in Consols. The course during the day is indicated by the following table:
